VOL. XVII. NO. 56. TOLEDO, OHIO, MONDAY JUNE 27, 1892. LAST EDITION. TWO CENTS.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

U. S. Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Toledo, Ohio, June 27.

A storm of slight energy developed over Iowa and moved rapidly northeastward, increasing in energy and magnitude and is central over Lake Michigan. It has caused very heavy rains during the night over Minnesota, Wisconsin and at stations on the coasts of Lake Erie and Michigan. The heaviest falls reported are as follows: LaCrosse, 1.12 inches; Alpena, 1.10 inches; Milwaukee, 1.04; Green Bay, 1.06; Manistee, 1; Toledo, .84; St. Paul, .64; Chicago, .48; and at other stations less than half an inch. There is a low area of pressure central over North Dakota which as yet has caused but very light showers over the northwest. There is an area of high pressure over Florida and another central over Colorado and Kansas. The weather in the west and south is fair; elsewhere it is cloudy and rainy.

The temperature over the lake region is below the normal, and in all other sections about normal.

Forecast for Toledo and vicinity for next 36 hours—Fair followed by rain this afternoon or to-night, continued cool weather. Brisk westerly winds.

E. A. HANNER, Observer.

Forecast for Ohio—Showers to-day; generally fair Tuesday, westerly winds, slightly warmer.

Indiana—Probably fair Tuesday; northwesterly winds; warmer in northern portion.

Illinois and Wisconsin—Probably fair on Tuesday; westerly winds; slightly warmer.

Michigan—Rain to-day; generally fair Tuesday; winds shifting to westerly; slightly warmer.

Can be counted on to cure Catarrh—Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It's nothing new. For 25 years it has been doing that very thing. It gives prompt and complete relief—but you want more than that. And you get it, with this Remedy—there's a cure that is perfect and permanent. The worst chronic cases, no matter of how long standing, yield to its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties. "Cold in the Head" needs but a few applications. Catarrhal Headache, and all the troubles that come from Catarrh, are at once relieved and cured.

You can count on something else, too—$500 in cash.

You can count on it, but it's more than doubtful whether you earn it.

The proprietors of Dr. Sage's Remedy, in good faith, offer that amount for an incurable case of Catarrh. Don't think that you have one, though. They'll pay you, if they can't cure you. That's certain.

But they can cure you. That's just about as certain, too. Can you ask more?

CHICAGO IS AFLOAT

Thousands of Houses Have Been Submerged.

And the Damage Will be Very Heavy.

The Harbor Blocked by Large Craft.

Over Two Hundred Boats Caught in the Jam.

Tug Men Powerless to do Anything With the High Water and Unusually Stiff Current Now Running.

Chicago, June 27.—(Special.)—Up to last evening there were ninety to one hundred and ten sailing vessels in the basin or in the slips at the mouth of the harbor, and also numerous steam crafts, all with cargoes on board consigned to various wharves in the inner harbor. The masters were waiting impatiently for the word of the harbormaster to allow them to come into and up the river.

Vessels are lying in tiers at the foot of Randolph street viaduct, and the basin is full of craft at anchor. Should a sudden easterly storm arise these craft would suffer damage and perhaps destruction. The whole waiting fleet is compelled to keep full crews aboard and to feed them, and are thus under just as much expense as if they were actively in commission. So crowded are the slips at the mouth of the harbor that vessels can no longer enter them, and there will be great confusion and numerous jams when the tugs commence moving them out.

In the south branch 40 out-bound vessels are detained, and crafts are suffering detention at almost every point in the harbor, and there is grumbling on all sides at the delay. There were indignation meetings at all the tug offices yesterday, but the managers of the lines were powerless, of course, to do anything to relieve the situation while the current continued so swift. The stage of water in the south branch fell nearly two feet during the day, and, while the current remained about as swift as on Saturday, this falling of the water was taken as an indication that the flood was really subsiding.

There has been a proposition that the tug managers hold a meeting and agree upon some plan whereby the out-bound vessels can all be taken out before the in-bound fleets are brought into the river.

The plan was talked over yesterday, but no agreement was arrived at among the tugmen. It was urged that the south branch was already crowded, and that if arriving crafts are taken into it before these are taken out jams must ensue, which it will take days to clear, and the situation will be worse, even without a current, than it is at present.

The steamers Parnell and Conestoga are lying just through Van Buren street bridge and blockade things there, and at Twenty-second street are the big steamers Chas. F. Eddy, New York, City of Paris and Walter Vail, all loaded and bound out. These craft block the channel at that point and the river is also full of craft from Twelfth to Sixteenth street. In all, steam and sail, there are 40 craft in th's branch of the river, and it is urged that they should be towed down before any arriving craft are towed up into that region.

Seven great vessels are chartered to load at the Alton elevator, including the Nahant and Newell Eddy, and if they congregate about that house the situation can be imagined beforehand.

The passenger steamer City of Duluth, of the Lake Superior line, is among the fleet caught in the south branch. She is up in Mud Lake, or was at last accounts, and it was understood that several lumber piles had fallen down ahead of her, thus hemming her in. Saturday was her sailing night for Lake Superior, and a hundred or more passengers were at the wharf waiting for her, but they waited in vain. She leaves for Lake Superior just as soon as the embargo in the south branch is raised.

The big steamer Philip D. Armour, an arrival, was towed up the main river and into the north branch at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. She had two tugs through Rush street, and two more hooked on and she was successfully taken through State street and finally to her wharf. The draws of Rush and State street bridges were just as bad yesterday as they have been any time during the freshet. The river at State street was a perfect whirlpool.

A meeting of the masters of lumber vessels has been called at the lumber exchange wharf at the foot of Franklin street, where it is proposed to regularly choose a chairman and express indignation.

They charge that in the present condition of things in the Chicago harbor steamers and the large craft generally are given preference; that the lumber vessels are compelled to lie idle, out of the way, while the bridges are opened for the large craft. They say there are lumber loaded vessels lying in Chicago harbor which arrived here a week ago, and that large craft have arrived and cleared since that, passing through dozens of bridges. Resolutions will recite that vessels are compelled to keep full crews aboard, and that while they are doing nothing they are under full expense.

Last evening the stage of water at Van Buren street was one foot lower than on Saturday. In Mud Lake it was estimated that the water had receded two feet and a half. It rained during yesterday afternoon, however, and little hope was entertained that the current would be any less for some days.

THE CITY FLOODED.

Chicago People Driven From Their Homes by Water.

Chicago, June 27.—Five square miles of territory adjacent to the village of Dauphin, a suburb of this city, are buried beneath a flood and a thousand or more houses between State street and Lake Michigan are at the mercy of the waves which a strong northeast wind has forced through the basements and first floors.

The great body of water which has been collecting in the lake region has broken all barriers and is rushing down with terrific force upon Grand Crossing, whose citizens are panic-stricken by the sight of a sea of rising water, generally invading every home, driving householders either from their dwellings or to the second stories.

At the present writing there is not less than two feet of water in the streets. Every basement is flooded and the foundations of numbers of buildings are weakened.

The immediate cause of the flood is the breaking of the Eighty-seventh street bank, due to the accumulation of water during the recent storm.

Grand Crossing at midnight was in despair. At Fordham and Dauphin Park the suffering was only less in the degree that there were fewer to suffer and a less number to experience the terror of a possible death before morning in waters which were rising at the rate of one inch an hour. Every effort is being made by those overtaken by the flood to escape with their families. It is only by means of improvised rafts that movement from one point to another is possible. Up to the present no loss of life is reported, but rescue parties have started to help those whose perilous condition gives rise to a fear for their safety.

Two boys were drowned in that part of the west branch known as Mud Lake today.

STRUCK BOTTOM.

Land Makes Its Appearance Above the Water.

Chicago, June 27.—A cheer that drowned the croaking of innumerable frogs went up from Dauphin Park at noon to-day.

The waters were subsiding and the first land had emerged from the bosom of the muddy lake under which the town had lain for 48 hours.

Soon little islands made their appearance, and it was evident that if the fall continued as rapidly all day the village would be comparatively out of the water by nightfall.

The cutting or breaking of the Eighty-seventh street dyke had saved the Dauphin Parkers, but the Grand Crossing people were nearly as badly off as ever.

Even in the latter place, however, the flood showed signs of receding and there was universal joy in consequence.

Half the population of the village is at home to-day, and men, women and children are wading around barefoot trying to get household goods into safety or paddling around in boats in search of assistance.

Many families have deserted their homes altogether and gone to the city to live until the flood subsides.

The scene from any point is a striking one. On every side stretches a great expanse of water dotted with boats, rafts and wreckage. A high wind from the west churns the dirty water into foam and sends waves rolling into the first stories.

Women look out of the second-story windows and call directions to men who are splashing around in the water below, and the ubiquitous small boy is in his glory as he steers a washtub along with the swift current.

The violence of the wind and the consequent strength of the current threatens to cause great destruction.

Everywhere foundations are crumbling and walls being weakened, while as for sidewalks and everything movable have long since disappeared. Altogether the situation, while by no means so discouraging as that of last night or early this morning, is bad enough, and bright, sunshiny weather is the hope of the unfortunate suburbanites.

THE DYKE WAS CUT.

Four Men Seen to Start the Chicago Flood.

Chicago, June 27.—There were rumors last night that the Eighty-seventh street dyke, the breaking of which flooded the suburban towns, Grand Crossing and Dauphin Park, had been cut.

These rumors have been confirmed by one witness and an examination of the side lines of the fifty foot torrent.

The son of J. B. Richmond, who lives near the dyke, saw four men, late Saturday night, cutting the dyke with picks and shovels. He asked them what they were doing, and for answer received a command to "get out" in a hurry, the order being emphasized, so he declares, by a shotgun placed in direct line with his head.

The boy, thoroughly frightened, ran home, but told no one the occurrence until his father returned from town late at night. He immediately notified Street Commissioner Kentzler, who early yesterday morning, with a force of workmen and a squad of police from Grand Crossing, started out to repair the dyke and arrest the men who were seen cutting it.

SHOT HIM DEAD

Big Sensation in a New York Court.

Max Clerget Pleads Guilty to a Charge

And is Killed Before He Could be Sentenced.

A Brother's Revenge Was Swift and Sure.

The Murderer Arrested Immediately After the Deed—Great Excitement Following the Tragic Event.

New York, June 27.—Max Clerget, aged 18, who had just pleaded guilty of criminal assault upon Sarah Divin, was shot and killed in the general sessions court this morning by the girl's brother, Edward Divin. The murderer was promptly arrested.

Sarah Divin was Clerget's sister-in-law. The outrage was committed June 18, at 543 East Fifteenth street. Clerget was arrested on the same day.

Judge Martine was trying another case when Clerget was brought to the bar to plead to the indictment against him.

The prisoner pleaded guilty and was being led away when Divin rushed forward and shot him dead.

There was great excitement following the tragic event.

POLITICS IN INDIANA

The Republicans Having a Nice Row.

Harrison Comes Out Against Chase.

The Fighting Parson Starts Out for Gore and Scores Points in the First Round.

Indianapolis, June 27.—(Special)—Governor Chase to-day will begin an open warfare upon Harrison's friends. He will invite them to an open combat and challenge them to dare continue their secret and cowardly work of stabbing him in the back at every opportunity. He has lost all political patience, and from now until after the state convention and longer if need be, he will meet them on their own grounds but with weapons more deadly. He has decided to expose the infamous attacks that have been made upon him personally and politically by members of his own party and they will be forced to fight or show the white feather. The governor reiterated last night that he is a "peace man," but that was no reason why he should sit quietly by while members of his own party were traducing and maligning him, and willfully and maliciously misrepresenting his position.

The expose is the result of a combination of circumstances that have become positively known since the Minneapolis republican convention. It was at that convention, after the nomination of Harrison had been effected, that the latter's friends quitely gave orders to the henchmen of the adminstration from various portions of Indiana that Chase must be defeated for governor. As soon as they returned to Indiana the movement against him was commenced. Chairman Gowdy of the state committee readily fell in line with the orders from the man in the White House and Rhody Shiel, and every federal officeholder in the state began talking "anything to beat Chase." Even the Journal, the administration organ, was unable to control its pent up feelings of enmity for Chase.

The governor has lost his patience. He has watched the trickery and the dishonorable methods being employed to defeat him for several weeks past and after a consultation with friends agreed to at least expose that part of the work which places him in what he alleges as a wrong light before the laboring classes. To counteract the effect of the work done against him by his republican enemies, he has issued a circular entitled, "The Fraud Exposed," and last night mailed 10,000 of them to prominent republican voters of Indiana. The circular is confined to the statements and charges made by the Journal and individual members of the republican party, that the railroad men as a class would refuse to support him on account of positions he has taken during his political career against them.

BIDWELL FOR PRESIDENT

Such are the Wishes of the Prohibitionists,

So Far as Present Signs Indicate.

Delegates Gathering for the Great Cold Water Convention to be Held in Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O., June 27.—Delegates to the prohibition national convention continue to swell the number already registered at the various hotels.

The arrivals to date are the advance guards of the greater column which will make its appearance to-morrow.

The drift of sentiment among the delegates who are here seems to grow in favor of Bidwell's nomination.

As to Ohio her vote will go to Gideon T. Stewart on the first ballot.

There is a probability that Bidwell will be nominated on the first ballot and a remote possibility only that the contest between Bidwell and Demorest may attain such warmth as to make a new man advisable.

VARIOUS COMMENTS

Made Concerning the Assault on Gladstone.

London, June 27.—Commenting on the assault on Mr. Gladstone Saturday, the Pall Mall Gazette says that Mr. Gladstone's language is harmless when it is compared with the Tory methods of venting their hatred during the "Jingo" period.

At that time unsavory letters reached Mr. Gladstone and his wife by every post. Sometimes the writers sent postcards to Mr. Gladstone, on which, expressed in the foulest language, were revolting wishes for destruction.

The Star says the Tories at Salisbury have issued a cartoon entitled "The Grand Old Man's Last Journey." It depicts Mr. Gladstone, with his 83 years, bearing a palm in his left hand and his home rule bill in his right hand, being dragged down to hell by the devil.

The cartoon has so shocked the electors, even those who are opposed to Mr. Gladstone, that most of the copies have been called in. High prices are offered for the remainder that are still in circulation.

CHOLERA.

London, June 27.—A dispatch to the Times from St. Petersburg says: "The cholera has reached Tiflis. In their panic the Russian trans-Caspian censors are suppressing the cholera telegrams to newspapers."

MINIMUM TARIFFS.

Berlin, June 27.—It is stated that the queen of Spain has signed a decree granting minimum tariffs to Germany.

BORUP MUST COME HOME

He Has Got His Government Into Trouble.

The American Legation Take Decisive Action.

Detectives Watching the United States Representatives in Paris —Oudin Released.

Paris, June 27.—The authorities have released M. Oudin, who was arrested with M. Grenier, the self-confessed revealer of secrets of the French plans of defense.

Capt. Borup, military attache of the American legation, who denies that he sold the plans to Italy and Germany, has been advised to remain in Paris to face the matter out.

His statement is that M. Grenier's visits were to screen his connections elsewhere. He offers all his letters and papers for inspection.

Among the papers taken by M. Grenier were plans for the defense of French Mediterranean ports and Corsica, and a code of marine signals prepared for use in the event of war with Italy.

The American legation has asked the Washington authorities to recall Capt. Borup.

Capt. Borup seems to have lost his head and has given several contradictory versions in his interviews with reporters. A detective is watching the residence of Capt. Borup and the American legation.

RIOT IN THE STREETS.

Police and Socialists Come Together in Brussels.

Brussels, June 27.—While some socialists were returning from an excursion last night they became disorderly in the streets. The police ordered them to disperse, but they refused to do so and the police charged upon them.

In the conflict that ensued the police were overpowered and their arms taken from them.

A number of policemen were severely wounded by their own weapons in the hands of the rioters. The civic guards were called out and dispersed the mob. Several of the leaders of the rioters were arrested.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Electric Cars Hit Hard in Boston.

A Number of People Seriously Injured.

An Occurrence That Will Prove Interesting to the People of This City.

Boston, June 27.—About 11 o'clock last night two electric cars, in widely separated parts of the city, were struck either by lightning or by the motor current through burned out insulation, and several passengers were hurt in the rush to escape. Following the list of injured.

On car No. 2046, which was struck in Tremont street between Concord and Worcester streets: Arthur Frye, aged 30, severe contusions of left knee.

Mrs. Nellie Fay, aged 25, head and face badly injured.

Michael McGillicuddy, aged 30, right leg severely injured.

Mrs. Henry Humphreys, aged 25, bruised on body, arms and legs.

Mrs. Mary McCann, aged 44, shock.

Kate Holton, aged 17, electric shock and bruised.

Annie Holton, Mary McGonnigle, aged 17, Mary J. McCann, aged 19, and Kate McCann, bruised.

Kate Horan, aged 44, back, sides and hip seriously injured.

In car No. 2058, which was struck in Hanover street near Cross, Mrs. Annie Collins, aged 50, bruised and cut on face and fractured right arm.

Albert Carlton, aged 26, severe cut over left eye and head badly bruised.

Hattie Harding, aged 24, severely injured in side.

Of the passengers in car No. 2046 eight were attended by neighbors and physicians and taken to their homes in carriages and three were taken to the city hospital. The women passengers in the other car were sent to their homes in carriages by the company.

ROLLED INTO THE POND.

A Queer Accident to a Sleeping Car on a Southern Railroad.

New Orleans, June 27.—A Vicksburg, Miss., special says: While passing a pond four miles east of this city the sleeper attached to the west bound E. & V. passenger train left the track and tumbled down the embankment fully 20 feet high into the pond at its base, said to be 18 feet deep.

The train was making 40 miles an hour and went some distance before its speed could be slackened.

Upon investigation it was found the car was partly submerged, but none of the passengers were seriously hurt, but all were more or less half drowned and cut and bruised. The full particulars have not yet been obtained.

DIED IN A HOSPITAL.

New York, June 27.—F. William Yeats, the young Englishman who was forcibly put ashore from the Red Star steamer Belgenland, in Jersey City, Saturday morning, died in a hospital ambulance shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday morning. His body will be held at the morgue subject to the order of County Physician Converse, who can order an inquest or not, as he sees fit.

FREE COINAGE.

The Plan Upon Which the People's Party Will Fight Its Campaign.

St. Louis, June 27.—H. E. Taubeneck, the chairman of the people's party national executive committee, was seen at the committee's headquarters in this city, and questioned regarding the party's prospects. Said he: "You can rest assured that our national convention will be a big concern. It will be a deliberative body not influenced by federal officeholders or those who expect federal offices."

Regarding the platforms adopted at Minneapolis and Chicago Mr. Taubeneck said that so far as he could see they were, with the exception of the tariff planks, identical. As to the attitude the silver producing states would probably take during the coming campaign Mr. Taubeneck stated: "From the correspondence I am receiving, especially from Colorado, they say that neither Harrison nor Cleveland can poll over 5 per cent. of their respective party votes. That holds true in every other mining state. Colorado has 40,000 voters enrolled in her silver clubs. Every one is pledged to vote for no man nor party unless they favor free and unlimited coinage of silver, and my opinion is that these people mean exactly what they say. The democratic delegates from Colorado at the Chicago convention have called a convention of democrats for Colorado. I think they will declare both the nominee and platform at Chicago as undemocratic, repudiate it, and elect delegates to confer with the people's party at Omaha."

"They will also call on every other silver state to do the same, and I think it will be done. The executive committee of the bi-metallic leagues is in session now, and from information I have they will declare both the old parties as enemies to bi-metallism and issue a call to the free silver clubs and the bi-metallic leagues to send delegates to Omaha and confer with the people's party. With the proper nominations and with a good canvass we will sweep the south and the west. Everything south of the Ohio and everything west of the Mississippi river."

"What is the voting strength of your party and the different industrial organizations who took part in the February conference?"

"That is not any easy task to get at because some of the organizations will admit members who are not eligible to vote, but from the best estimates made from the roll books of the different organizations last February we have between six million and seven million voters that belong to the different organizations."

THEY SEE THE STORM

That Portends Danger to the Republican Party.

The Senate to Make Some Campaign Material.

The McKinley Bill Must be Defended or There Will be Trouble all Along the Line.

Washington, June 27.—A sufficient number of democratic congressmen had returned from Chicago this morning to constitute a quorum which was present for the first time in ten days.

Mr. Davis, F. A., Kansas, raised the point of no quorum on the approval of the journal and a call of the house ensued, showing 178 members present. The journal for the last two sessions was then approved. Mr. Sayers (dem., Texas), called up the general deficiency bill and moved its passage.

Mr. Watson, F. A., Georgia, demanded the yeas and nays. The bill was then passed—yeas 185, nays 4.

The conference report on the military academy appropriation bill was agreed to.

In the Senate.

Washington, June 27.—In the senate Mr. Hale introduced the following resolution and gave notice that he should call it up for action to-morrow.

"Whereas, At no time has so large a proportion of the American people been employed at so high wages and purchasing the necessities and comforts of life at so low prices as in the year 1892; and

"Whereas, The balance of trade with foreign countries has never been so large in favor of the United States as in the past year; and

"Whereas, These conditions exist and are largely due to the republican policy of 'protection,' therefore

"Resolved, That the committee on finance be and is hereby directed to inquire into the effect of a policy of 'tariff for revenue only,' upon the labor and the industries of the United States, and to report upon the same to the senate."

Mr. Stewart offered an amendment to his pending silver bill to lie over and be printed, providing that any owner of silver bullion may have the same coined for his benefit, and such coin shall be legal tender for all debts, provided that foreign silver coin shall be excluded from the provisions of this act.

The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was taken up, Mr. Allison stating that it was largely a bill of detail with very few controverted questions. The bill appropriates $22,034,772, or $351,020 more than the amount of the bill as it passed the house, and $710,266 less than the estimates for next year. The senate committee restored to the bill the appropriation for the pay of clerks to senators, omitted by the house, and made provision for the Utah commission which the house abolished.

MORE FIGHTING.

The Rebel Chief Vargas Reported to Have Been Killed.

New York, June 27.—The Herald correspondent at Montevideo sends additional details of the fighting at Rivera, near Santa Anna. It appears that a force of 450 insurgents attacked 300 federal troops there, but were repulsed after a desperate fight.

The rebel chief Vargas was killed in the midst of the fight. The subordinate rebel officers rallied their men, however, and the government troops were finally forced back into the town, where they now are entrenched.

There seems to be little doubt that the whole province is in a state of revolt. Provisions are getting scarce, and should the present state of affairs continue there will be great suffering throughout Matto Grosso.

UNDER POLICE PROTECTION

Timothy Healy Playing in Hard Luck.

He is Reaping the Fruits of a Foul Tongue—Parnellites are Still Ugly.

Dublin, June 27.—Tim Healy was present at a meeting at Arklow yesterday. So many threats had been made against him that he found it necessary to have a bodyguard composed of priests and two policemen. The latter were armed with rifles.

Extra policemen were on duty at every station at which the train stopped. The Parnellites knew that Mr. Healy was to travel over the line and hostile crowds gathered at each station. The presence of the police prevented any overt act, but the crowd vented their spite by assailing Mr. Healy with derisive cheers.

Henry VIII, during his reign put to death 71,400 persons, most of them virtuous or unoffending.

MADE NO SELECTION.

National Republican Committee in Session.

Many Things Arise to Trouble the Leaders.

Harrison is Going to Have a Finger in the Pie or Know the Reason Why.

Washington, June 27.—The new republican national committee is in session in this city to-day for the purpose of effecting a permanent organization.

The selection of a chairman to succeed Gen. Clarkson is the most important subject that will come up for consideration. President Harrison favors the candidacy of Land Commissioner Carter above all others who have been mentioned in connection with the vacancy, and the action of the committee depends entirely upon the outcome of a conference which took place this morning between the president and Mr. Carter, who has just returned from Montana, where he has been looking over the situation.

There are two obstacles to the land commissioner's candidacy. First, he is not a member of the national committee, and second, even if the Montana member should resign in his favor there is some doubt regarding the ability of the republicans in that state to manage the coming campaign without Mr. Carter's personal assistance, in which case of course it would be impossible for him to accept the chairmanship of the national committee.

His recent trip to the west was for the purpose of deciding these points, and if he found the situation favorable he will be recommended by the president to the national committee, and his selection will follow as a matter of course.

Although the republican national committee will meet 12 o'clock for the purpose of organizing for the campaign, at 11 o'clock the situation was as nebulous as it was last night. What the outcome will be no one seems to be able to tell, certainly no one does tell, and those asked about the matter frankly say they cannot tell.

Conferences have been the order of the night and day, but so far they have resulted in nothing definite. Shortly before midnight Mr. Michener, of Indiana; Mr. Holbert, of New York; Mr. Cheney, of New Hampshire, and Mr. Cogrswell, of Massachusetts, went over to see the president. When the reached the white house they found Secretary Elkins. To these gentlemen, it is said, the president stated in language that could not be misunderstood, that he did not desire Mr. Clarkson to be made chairman. Among the names mentioned by the president, were those of Sewell, of New Jersey; Massey, of Delaware, and Campbell, of Illinois.

The Post this morning says: "The president has requested Mr. Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York, to act as treasurer of the committee, and Mr. Bliss has agreed to act in that capacity.

The president has been anxious to have a business man of high standing in this capacity in order to give confidence to the business men in New York and elsewhere who may be called upon to furnish the sinews of war, and no man can command this confidence so much as Mr. Bliss.

The president also has a pet scheme, which, it is claimed, will be advocated in the committee, and that is the appointment of an advisory committee with headquarters in Washington, which will directly represent him in the campaign.

It is claimed that the president, Secretary Foster and Secretary Elkins will be members of this committee, and that Chairman Clarkson will be required to act as a member of this advisory committee.

At 10 o'clock Mr. Clarkson had an interview with the president lasting more than half an hour. At its conclusion the chairman was driven to the Arlington where the committee was to meet at noon. He said his interview with President Harrison was pleasant. They talked, of course, about the chairmanship and Mr. Clarkson said that he believed four names would go before the committee for chairman—Messrs. Campbell, of Illinois; Sewell, of New Jersey; Massey, of Delaware, and Carter, of Montana.

As for himself Mr. Clarkson said he was not sure that he wanted the chairmanship or would take it under the conditions that exist. So far as can now be learned the probabilities are against the selection of any one of the gentlemen named by Mr. Clarkson. Ex-Senator Sewell and Mr. Campbell have both declined to be considered in connection with the office owing to their business engagements. Mr. Massey is not considered a probability because of his lack of acquaintance.

Mr. Carter's location is against him, it being conceded that an eastern man must be chosen. Ex-Gov. Cheney, of New Hampshire, is spoken of, but the opinion is held in well informed circles that Mr. Michener will finally be agreed upon for chairman, and that despite his unwillingness to serve, he will take the place and work with his customary zeal for the election of the candidate he was so largely instrumental in nominating.

Later—The committee has taken a recess without selecting a chairman.

REID'S UNIONISM.

It is the Talk of the Workmen all Over.

Boston No. 13 Will Take Action as Soon as No. 6 Has Spoken.

Boston, June 27.—At yesterday's meeting of typographical union, 13, the matter of Whitelaw Reid's indorsement by a committee of New York printers, and his settlement with the New York union on the eve of the holding of the republican national convention was brought up, but was laid over until the next meeting, the members deciding that they had no right to express an opinion upon the subject until after "Big Six" had settled the question.

SMALLPOX SCARE.

Well Developed Case of the Pest at Kingston, N. Y.

Kingston, N. Y., June27.—Much excitement was occasioned over the outbreak of smallpox here.

A young man came from New Jersey two weeks ago to visit his uncle, Luther Durham, a well known resident of this city.

Shortly after his arrival an outbreak was noticeable on his person and the family physician was summoned. He pronounced it a case of smallpox.

Other physicians differed in their opinion, but advised the young man to leave the city, which he did. In a few days an eruption made its appearance on Mrs. Durham, and during a consultation between Health Officer Chambers and other physicians yesterday, it was decided that it was a genuine case of smallpox.

A number of persons had already been exposed, but the family have been quarantined and steps have been taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

WHITTIER WILL WRITE THE ODE

Amesbury, Mass., June 27.—It is now a settled fact that Poet Whittier will write the opening ode for the world's fair at Chicago. When the matter was first broached to the poet, he was unable to give a definite answer, but improved health will permit him so to do. The title is still a secret to every one except Mr. Whittier.

THE DOMESTIC SERVANTS

They are Organizing for Shorter Hours.

Over a Million in the United Kingdom.

They are Slaves and Will Attempt to Break Away from Their Bondage.

London, June 27.—The first anniversary of the domestic servants' union, just celebrated in this city, develops the fact that this organization has gained strength during the first year of its existence, and promises soon to take a prominent place among the trades unions of the United Kingdom.

The convention was made up of something over eight hundred delegates, representing the domestic servants of London and the provinces, both male and female, the chair being occupied by Mr. A. Thomson, a coachman.

After complimenting the domestic servants of the metropolis on the success of their movement, he drew attention to the abnormally long hours they were compelled to work. Many servants he knew were obliged to be up and about at seven in the morning, and were unable to retire until one or two o'clock the following morning. Sixteen and seventeen hours were generally worked, while they were compelled to be in attendance on Sundays, and for that they did not receive an extra penny.

It was his contention that every worker who was compelled to work on Sunday should receive extra pay, and he trusted that they would soon be able to demand that concession. They also wished to improve the character system, because a character was a servant's mainstay. The employers demanded a character and they should be compelled by law to give the servant one in return.

He said that if it were possible for them to secure a hearing before the labor commission there would be revelations that would astonish the country. He had known married men servants with families who had not been able to see their wives for weeks at a time, and when they did so they were compelled to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. Greenman, late secretary of the union, said that the domestic servants were so numerous that they could form one of the most formidable trades' unions in existence.

From the late census he found that, including coachmen, gardeners, male indoor servants, female domestic servants, inn and hotel servants, cooks and washerwomen there was a total of 1,800,000 domestic servants in the United Kingdom.

A resolution was carried by acclamation that the vast majority of these were little better than slaves, and that it was high time that something was done for them.

DIAZ WILL WIN.

He Will Again Be Made President of Mexico.

City of Mexico, June 27.—The general election for electors who will, in July, vote for candidates for president, occurred in this city yesterday. There was no excitement or demonstration of any kind.

No one doubts that the choice of the great majority of electors will fall on Gen. Diaz. Even the opposition newspapers declare that the government will permit entire freedom of expression and popular sentiment.

ROMAN CATHOLIC KNIGHTS

They are Organizing With Secret Pass Words.

All Opposition to the Code Has Been Removed by Archbishop Walsh.

Toronto, Ont., June 27.—At a session of the Roman Catholic Union of the Knights of St. John a resolution was adopted instructing the supreme board of trustees to draw up a system of signs and passwords.

The adoption of such a code has long been under discussion, but was opposed by the clergy.

A petition, however, was recently circulated and upon its presentation to Archbishop Walsh, supreme spiritual adviser of the order, was approved by him, he stating in a letter that such a code might be adopted provided such passwords and signs be made known to the competent ecclesiastical authority if asked for.

TURNED TO STONE.

Two Years Underground Petrified James Alcorn's Body.

Cincinnati, June 27.—The body of James Alcorn was exhumed at Wesleyan cemetery, Covington, and found to be in a perfect state of petrification.

Alcorn was buried two years ago in a corner of the cemetery near a spring. The water is strongly charged with minerals that are supposed to have turned the body into stone. One end of the wooden coffin box was also petrified. Alcorn's relatives had the body disinterred to ship it to Knoxville, Tenn., where his wife is buried. On account of its great weight, several hundred pounds, it will have to be shipped as freight.

WILL BE RECONCILED.

Mr. and Mrs. Drayton to Settle All Difficulties.

New York, June 27.—It is said by those in a position to know that strenuous efforts are making to effect a reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Drayton, and that Mrs. Astor confidently expects it to be effected.

This is assigned as a reason for her departure for Europe without her daughter. It is also whispered that her share in the estate, which would have been $850,000, will be paid her by her brother, John Jacob Astor, who will even increase it to a round million.

Mrs. Drayton sails for Europe on July 6 on the Teutonic, and it is said she will be permitted to see one of the children before her departure, a circumstance which is looked upon as direct indication of an early reconciliation.

A WONDERFUL MACHINE.

There is no doubt that man is a fine mechanism, but like every other machine he wears out by friction. It is said that he is born again every two or three years. His body is virtually re-made from food. To retard this making over is radically wrong, as a man loses so much vitality in the delayed process that it takes a long time to recuperate. The process of making anew is so accelerated by purging with Brandreth's Pills that a new man, as it were, may be made in two or three months, and the change in the mechanism is such that the worn out part is replaced by the new without the usual running down of the entire machine. You don't have to stop for repairs. Purge away with Brandreth's Pills the old, diseased and worn out body. They are purely vegetable, absolutely harmless, and safe to take at any time.

IN THE EARLY DAYS OF JULY—GO EAST.

The rate for first-class excursion tickets from Toledo to New York and return, over the Pennsylvania Short lines, will be less than the regular fare one way for the excursions of July 5, 6 and 7. You can do your business, visit all your friends and the various resorts in the east before August 15, which is the limit for return tickets. Learn all about it by addressing Stockton, Pennsylvania Passenger Station, Toledo.

ALL IS WELL.

Springfield, O., June 27.—Harry Wheeler and Miss Maud Cummings, the elopers who were married in Buffalo, arrived home to-night. They received the parental blessing.

WORKING FOR A PARDON.

Chicago People Interest Themselves in the Anarchists.

Chicago, June 27.—A delegated convention consisting of representatives of 134 bodies—turners, trades unionists, fraternal social, singing and labor societies—was held yesterday at Uhlich's hall and started the movement to secure the pardon of the imprisoned Chicago anarchists.

The delegates had been appointed to the convention by their societies or unions in response to a petition looking toward the pardon of Neebe, Fielden and Schwab, the anarchists now confined in the penitentiary at Joliet. A petition to the governor was read and referred to a committee of 21, and arrangements were made for the naming of sub-committees.

DESHLER NOTES.

Deshler, O., June 27.—(Special)—N. Larkum was brought before Mayor Wheeler to answer to the charge of violating the Sunday ordinance. He received 55 days in the Toledo stone-yard.

The trustees of the Presbyterian church are ready to receive bids for the construction of their new church.

Miss Grace Winter, who has been attending college in New York, is visiting her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Winter.

W. H. Mitchell, of Toledo, was in town this week.

DIVORCE GRANTED.

Fremont, O., June 27.—(Special)—The divorce case of Frank Dorr v. Margaret Dorr was decided in common pleas court Saturday afternoon. The divorce was granted, and the custody of the minor child given to the plaintiff.

OFF FOR IRELAND.

Quebec, June 27.—The Hon. Edward Blake sailed for Ireland yesterday on the steamer Parisian. He is to be a candidate for parliament.

PELTED WITH STONES

Mr. Gladstone the Object of an Assault.

His Carriage Attacked in the Streets.

The Grand Old Leader Was Not Seriously Injured, However, and He Will Fill His Dates.

London, June 27.—Mr. Gladstone telegraphs to the United Press correspondent as follows:

"I am doing well. I am under the care of Dr. Granger, of Chester. I hope to keep my engagements in the north.

"WILLIAM E. GLADSTONE."

Since it became certain that the injury to Mr. Gladstone was in all probability the result of heedlessness, the public excitement has cooled down considerably.

The throwing of stones and other missiles at gentlemen's carriages has grown to be a serious annoyance in London and other places.

It seems to be one way of expressing the antipathy of the lowest class, of wealth in any form, and it is believed that Mr. Gladstone was pelted just as any other gentleman would have been pelted who might have happened to be passing at the time.

Among the telegrams received at Hawarden regarding Mr. Gladstone's condition were anxious and sympathetic inquiries from Mr. Balfour and other conservative leaders.

Mr. Gladstone's Midlothian constituents also showed their anxiety for the condition of their leader.

A STRIKE SETTLED.

The Quarrymen in the East Will Go to Work.

Boston, June 27.—It appears that the granite troubles will be settled on Tuesday when the manufacturers' executive committee will meet to consider a proposition made by the quarrymen's union last week.

The proposition, which a great many manufacturers are willing to accept, provides for a four year compromise from March 1, a nine hour day and an average price of 23 cents per hour, per day on or before the 15th of each month.

RESIGNATIONS.

Columbus, O., June 27.—Governor McKinley has received and accepted the resignation of Dr. Wm. W. Waddle, of Chillicothe, as a member of the board of trustees of the Ohio university. The governor also accepted the resignation of J. S. Hare, of Upper Sandusky, as a member of the board of trustees of the deaf and dumb asylum, and appointed W. A. Gibson, of the same city, to the vacancy.

FISH ARE BITING.

The Sport Opens Up at Ten Mile Creek.

The Fish are Ravenous—Strings of Three Hundred Caught Yesterday —Major Leflet in Line.

The fishing season has been a little backward this spring on account of the heavy rains and the consequent swollen and muddy streams. Toledo fishermen have been anxiously awaiting the time when they could take up their rods and wander down to Ten Mile creek. Last week it was the general impression that the creek was too muddy for fishing, and very few ventured down. Saturday and yesterday, however, saw quite a number of anglers all along the creek, and they were well repaid for making the trip on speculation.

The creek was never in better condition than at present. The water is clear and fish biting lively, almost ravenously. Old timers say that such fishing in June has not been known in the creek for years.

Sun fish are pulled up as fast as the line can be thrown in, and they are no small fry. Black and rock bass are biting lively and run to good sizes. Quite a number of pike are being caught—they don't seem to be biting on minnows, but take worms readily.

There is an unusually large number of sheep-heads in the creek this spring. They have heretofore been very scarce. However, their presence is no source of gratification as they are not over good eating.

A number of parties yesterday caught as high as three hundred fish, all worth keeping.

The high water has made the minnows very scarce this spring. Very few fishermen along the creek have had any thus far. Maj. Leflet got the first lot along the bay shore.

Noticable among the improvements at the creek are the buildings and docks recently constructed my Maj. Leflet. He has everything in ship-shape for the summer's sport.

FROM CAPTAIN TO MAJOR.

Bucyrus, O., June 27.—The companies of the Eighth regiment, National Guard, have voted for a Major. Captain Edward Vollerath, of the Bucyrus City Guard, received 332 votes as against 59 cast for Major E. T. Taggart, of Akron.

ARRIVED IN SAFETY.

New York, June 27.—The steamship Vega, which was five days overdue and which was supposed to have been in collision at sea, with the sailing vessel Fred B. Taylor, arrived at quarantine at 5:12 o'clock this morning. She reports that she was not in collision with the Taylor or any other vessel.

LACTATED FOOD.

Thousands of Mothers in a Happy Mood.

Physicians of all Schools Have Been Interviewed.

Boston Has a Registrar of Long Service.

He Tells What the Weather Will Produce.

Will Multiply Infant Deaths Unless Care is Taken.

Food.

Babies cry and babies die for want of it.

It is good.

It is wholesome.

It is the only preventive of cholera infantum the physicians can find.

It is lactated food, say the physicians.

It is made in Burlington, Vt., under the direct supervision of no less a chemist than Prof. Boynton, of the Vermont university.

For want of it half a hundred infants died in Boston the other week, a dozen of them from cholera infantum.

Mr. Appolonio has been city registrar for 37 years, so says the Boston Globe.

He has been longer in the service than any registrar in the country.

He says that the hot weather is just as sure to multiply the deaths of infants as the infants are to be born.

Improper nourishment is at the bottom of it.

Therefore physicians of every school have recommended lactated food.

Thousands of mothers have testified to the fact that it has done what nothing else could—it has saved their little ones.

No better evidence can be offered of superiority than the many instances in which fretful, peevish and sleepless babies as soon as put upon lactated food, sleep all night and wake up laughing. The happy change, physicians say, is solely due to the superior nourishing and satisfying qualities of this food.

The principal element of mother's milk is sugar of milk. This is the basis of lactated food. With it is combined the nutritious elements of the great cereals, wheat and barley, so prepared as to be readily digested and assimilated. The addition of the salts found in mother's milk makes lactated food a perfect substitute. Many mothers write that nothing else would agree with their children.

And so an article of food, invaluable for infants and invalids has come to be made. And in many a household it is the only diet of the bright babe that's the pride of all the family. And the grandmother in her second childhood, maybe, weak and feeble, unable to eat the hearty food that is set upon the table, enjoys this nutritive preparation, and lives like the other child, a happier and longer life because of it.

SIR WM. AITKEN.

A Noted English Surgeon Goes to His Reward.

London, June 27.—Sir Wm. Aitken, the noted surgeon and professor of pathology, is dead. He was born in Dundee, Scotland, April 23, 1825, his father being a surgeon of that place. In 1848 he was selected as demonstrator of anatomy at the university of Glasgow and was also pathologist of the Glasgow royal infirmary until April, 1855, when he volunteered for service in the army hospitals during the Crimean war.

He was one of a commission appointed to investigate the nature of the disease from which the troops were suffering.

Dr. Aitken was a corresponding member of the Royal Imperial Society of Physicians, of Vienna, of the Society of Medicine and Natural History at Dresden and the Imperial Society of Medicine at Constantinople.

In 1860 he was appointed a professor of pathology in the army medical school. He was knighted in 1887. He was the author of a "Medical History of the War With Russia" and various other works.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Fremont, O., June 27.(Special.)—Chas. Baker, a wellk-nown brick manufacturer of this city, died of bowel trouble very suddenly last night.

He was a member of the National Union.

A MILD REQUEST.

Fairies, find me a fern-strewed dell,
Whose soft floor slopes to a purling stream,
Where the violet nods to the heather bell
And the willows tremble and weep and dream.

Down where the trees are so thick and green
That, arching above, the heat of the sun
And daylight and twilight are merged in one.

Where the warblers and vireos chirp and sing,
Plucking the cones of the fragrant pine,
And the catbird whirrs on its rapid wing
Or broods in its nest in some thorny vine.

And when you have found me this fresh, cool nook,
Make me a hammock and stretch it there
Between two willows; then write me a book,
Some light reading—I little care.

Then, requisite more than all things else,
Get me a pretty girl in a summer gown;
A girl with eyes that glow and that melt,
With lips of coral and hair dark brown.

Let her sit by my side with a fan,
To cool my brow if it's damp, not hot,
To stroke my hair with her soft, white hand,
And I don't care whether school keeps or not.

—Laffan B. Merry in Boston News.

The mysterious subject of hypnotic influence has been agitating society in Calcutta. A young government clerk made several attempts recently to get married to the girl of his choice, but each time he was mysteriously overcome at the altar and thrown into a trance of stupor. He has made no less than six attempts, failing each itme.

CHICAGO UNIVERSITY.

It Will Open Without Show Next Fall.

Examination for Admission Now Being Held in Various Cities of the United States.

Chicago, June 27.—In 24 different cities of the United States examinations are being held to-day for admission to the new University of Chicago.

Fifteen hours will be allowed for the completion of all the examinations, which, according to members of the faculty who have a hand in their preparation, are of as high a standard as those governing admission to Harvard and Yale.

The university will quietly open its doors next fall, without ceremony or ostentation of any kind. Its system will be slightly different from that of the older institutions, one of the most radical changes consisting in the fact that it will be kept open continuously, instead of remaining closed during the summer months.

SCARLET CLOVER.

The following description of scarlet clover and its comparison with ordinary red clover is from Bulletin No. 16, of Delaware Experiment station:

Scarlet clover is an annual. About the first week in June it can be expected to mature a crop of seed, from sowings made during the preceding July, August and September. If pastured in the early spring it renews its growth, in part at least, and matures at the usual time. It may be seeded in April, a practice followed in central and southern Europe whenever it is to be used as a substitute for red clover crops ruined by severe winters. This plan has been attempted once at least by this station: a May sowing gave a very heavy growth during the following fall, but no blossoms appeared and the plants were destroyed during the winter by a fungus, harbored under the excessive forage. It is a rank grower at one stage of its development; stools to an unusual degree when opportunity offers; attains oftentimes to a height of two feet; is characterized by a brilliant scarlet blossom; will easily yield per acre, eight tons of green fodder if cut between the fifth and tenth of May; roots to a depth of four feet even in unfavorable soil; and for silage, hay, and to plow down for green manure compares well, under favorable conditions, with any leguminous crop.

In comparison with ordinary red clover, its marked peculiarities are:

1. Its ability to flourish on relatively poor soil.

2. Its development during the fall, winter and spring.

Growing at a time of year when most of our fowl weeds are in seed, it escapes one danger, and provided with an unusually well developed root system it finds sufficient food when the red clover would be on half rations.

As it grows when wheat and even rye seem dormant, scarlet clover cannot be seeded with winter grain. One or the other crop would be destroyed.

As it is in blossom on or about May 1st, it can be used for many purposes other than those usually served by red clover, particularly for soiling and for plowing down in place of rye.

NOTE.—This letter has a date.

A "Personal" from Marion Harland.

February 13th, 1892.

"In spite of my protest the Royal Baking Powder Co. continues to use a recommendation of Royal Baking Powder given by me several years ago."

"Since then my views and practice with regard to the powder manufactured by this Company have undergone a radical change. I give decided preference to a pure cream-of-tartar-and-soda mixture. For this reason Cleveland's Baking Powder is in steady use in my kitchen."

RECIPE FOR A COMIC OPERA.

Get a jingling, jangling tune, a danseuse, and a buffoon and an orchestra that murders all it plays,
And a chorus of glory that is all antique and houry, and you'll soon set up a show that really pays.

Get a heroine that's pretty, and steal what you think's witty from every blessed opera that's known;
You need not feel compunctions, for in getting up these functions, a conscience is a thing one shouldn't own.

Let there be a fleshly sally of a sprightly corps de ballet, that used to win applause in ancient Rome.
Get some puns that are so fearful they make people weak and tearful, till they have to be removed and taken home;

Then get a man half-witted, who is really to be pitied, and style him a comedian on the bill;
And write some love songs stupid, dragging in poor luckless Cupid, and buy a lot of costumes fit to kill.

When the structure is completed and the audience is seated, you'll sit back and count the shekels at the door.
You'll know in your inmost spirit many folks will come to hear it, and after every number yell for more.

MILL ADDITION.

Twenty-three Lots Disposed of at Good Figures.

The Wilbridge Mill addition sale Saturday was very successful. The sale would have been much larger had not Mr. Walbridge closed it earlier than anticipated. As it was, 23 lots were sold at a price aggregating $8,339. The best section of the addition is on the market still and will be closed out at private sales.

A SERIOUS RUNAWAY.

A Team Crashes Into a Carriage, Upsetting It.

A team belonging to the Toledo Bending company ran away yesterday afternoon and collided with a carriage on Broadway, upsetting the occupants, E. F. Fitts and Miss Fitts, of Tenth street. Mr. Fitts received some painful but not serious injuries. He was taken to his home in McGlynn's ambulance.

MUSICAL AND LITERARY

Commencement Exercises of St. Francis de Sales' Schools.

This evening the annual commencement exercises of St. Francis de Sales' parochial schools will be held at Wheeler's opera house. The distribution of prizes will also take place.

An excellent program has been arranged, and a large attendance and a delightful evening is anticipated.

FIFTY LOTS

Went Off at a Lively Rate at the Detwiler Sale.

The Detwiler special sale of lots closed Saturday night, at a late hour, and it was one of the most successful events of the kind ever held in this city.

The weather was perfect and the attendance greater than expected.

Over fifty lots were sold, aggregating a total of over $12,000.

HOTEL VICTORY.

The General Opening Postponed for a Few Days.

On account of the inability to procure electric cars for Put-in-Bay, it has been necessary to postpone the public opening and ball of Hotel Victory until July 12, or thereabouts. The invitational banquet will be held to-morrow evening, however. The hotel is now in first-class shape for business, and it is to be regretted that the cars are not on hand, since it would be almost an impossibility to handle the crowd without them.

MR. JOHN O'GRADY

Handsomely Remembered by His Brother Hibernians.

A very pleasant event occurred at the meeting of Division No. 1, A. O. H., at Druid hall yesterday afternoon. Among the most zealous workers in the order is Mr. John O'Grady He has just returned from the annual gathering of the Hibernians of the country, and after submitting his report as the county delegate, E. J. Gavin, in a happy talk, presented him with a beautiful gold watch-charm, in the form of a shamrock with the Hibernian emblems thereon. Mr. O'Grady expressed his thanks in a feeling manner, and a season of congratulations followed.

THAT WHEELING DEAL.

Result of the Meeting in New York Saturday.

Mr. Geo. E. Pomerov returned Saturday from New York, where he attended the meeting of the Wheeling & Lake Erie directors. Mr. Pomeroy, to a Bee this morning, said the chief matter before the meeting was the election of a director to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Emmons Blaine. E. W. Soper, of New York, was elected.

Another meeting of the directors will be held in this city July 7, when the extension of the road to Reading, Pa., will be considered further. At the same meeting the subject of increasing the capital stock of the company will be voted upon.

DIDN'T WE SAY SO?

Local Republicans Stirred Up by Col. Joe Bonner.

The Toledo Republican club met on Saturday night with an "enthusiastic attendance." This was the third trial, the two previous attempts to get up a meeting proving dismal failures. It seems Col Joe Bonner was too busy to be on hand before, but he put in an appearance Saturday, and as a result whooped 'er up. It was on the Colonel's motion that an open-air ratification was decided upon for next Saturday evening at the Memorial hall grounds, and it is thought that possibly it may be a go this time. An effort will be made to get Gov. McKinley and ex-Gov. Foraker to deliver addresses. Should these gentlemen be secured, the program as announced in the Bee last week of topics and speakers will lay over until a more propitious occasion. Local republicans would be in very bad shape, in fact would not be on earth, were it not for the good-looking Colonel Bonner.

SPEAKING OF A TOLEDOAN,

The Sporting Times, of New York, Says Something Nice.

The Sporting Times of this week has the following:

One of the most popular men connected with the bicycle trade of New York city, is Mr. A. J. Getz, manager of the Gendron Iron Wheel company's office. Mr. Getz is very well known among the bicycle trade, and his acquaintances are a legion, and in financial matters it is stated that Getz is without an equal. He leaves for his home in Toledo, Ohio, next week, for his much needed vacation, it being the first in three years. He has been with the Gendron people in this city for about five years, and under his watchful eye and careful management, the New York office has been made one of the Gendron's best and most successful branches. Albert is an enthusiastic cyclist and rider of no mean ability, but his modesty prevents him from saying that he is going to make any new records in the west, or become a benedict. We, however, have our weather eye upon him, and he has our best wishes.

THE POLITICAL EQUALITY CLUB

Will Hold Monthly Meetings Through July and August.

At the residence of Mrs. Judge Bentley, on Superior street, on Saturday afternoon, was held the meeting of the Political Equality club, which was as usual, well attended and interesting. The chapter on civil governments was followed by discussions of the democratic and republican national conventions and the part taken in them by women. The trend of the discussion was that, by practical demonstration of her ability to do good political work, and by making herself not only useful, but needful to the old parties, was making greatest strides toward securing the right of franchise. The course of lectures to be given by the club was discusssed and it was decided to join the Michigan Equal Rights women, who are making an effort to secure some of the best women orators of the country for a course, which they propose giving. On account of the many members of the club who will be absent from the city during July and August, there will be only two meetings held in these months. Pictures of Susan B. Anthony were distributed, and a large number sold, after which the meeting adjourned to meet Saturday afternoon, July 16, in the office of the Woman's Recorder, in the Worthington block.

NATURAL GAS BOND CASE

Appealed to the Circuit Court—Hearing July 6.

The case of Thomas Merrell against the city has been appealed to the circuit court by the plaintiff.

City Solicitor Read was this morning served with notice that the case had been appealed from common pleas court and that the plaintiff would make application for a preliminary injuction before the circuit court July 6, in chambers at the Law building.

THIRTY-THREE FEET

On St. Clair Street Purchased by Dr. Donnelly.

I. H. Detwiler & Co., this morning, sold 33 feet near the corner of Oak and St. Clair streets to Dr. James Donnelly, for $6,200. This is a part of the block recently purchased adjoining the People's theater.

This firm also placed on file to-day plats of Barker's Oak street addition, and Newton's Stocking's addition.

COUNCILMAN DONER

Arrested by a Fly Copper, Who Knew His Business.

A fly copper, who might have been in better business, arrested Councilman George M. Doner last evening for no other reason than that he was standing on a street corner waiting for a car. The energetic copper had his pains for his trouble, for of course Mr. Doner was at once released when Lieut. O'Dwyer saw him. Some members of the police force need a little sense badly.

STILL AT WAR.

Street Railroad Attorneys Agree and Then Disagree,

So the Judge Compels the Case to be Submitted—Work Ceases in the Meantime.

The attorneys representing the two street railway companies gathered in Judge Harmon's room of the common pleas court this morning and argued a motion to dissolve the injunction restraining the Consolidated from reconstructing tracks.

The Robisons consented to the dissolution of the injuction, relative to Adams street, on the ground that the probate court provided for the maintenance of these tracks. The Consolidated drafted a journal entry, which the Robisons objected to. A spirited discussion followed, and the Robisons withdrew their consent. The Consolidated then applied for permission to go ahead and lay the track, but the court held that the order could not be made until the case was submitted.

Workmen had commenced the reconstruction, but were compelled to cease on account of the change in the order of the court.

Baccarat, or baccara, seems to exercise a singular fascination over royalty. Ex-King Milan lately indulged in it, and the result was a row, as well as a subsequent scandal and an apology, by which the king was satisfied. The lot of an ex-king is no more to be envied than is the lot of an ex-president, and perhaps he is not to be blamed if he seeks distraction. It will be remembered that Candide once sat down at a dinner table in Venice with six deposed monarchs, who visited the town to see the carnival, and so forget their woes.

Cleveland Street Car Strike Unsettled.

Neither Employer or Employe Will Give In—Another Conference to be Held.

Cleveland, O., June 27.—A committee representing the striking railroad men met the officials of the East Cleveland company, in the mayor's office, at noon to-day, and submitted a proposition for the settlement of the strike.

The company refused to consider the proposition and submitted one of its own which was, in turn, rejected by the strikers.

Another meeting will be held but the chances for a settlement are not at all promising. No attempts have been made to run care to-day, and everything is quiet.

TWO RUNAWAY HORSES

Drag an Unconscious Man Over the Pavement

At Breakneck Speed—He Had the Reins Around His Body—Not Expected to Live.

This morning the people on Cherry street were horrified to see a powerful gray team dashing madly down the street dragging the unconscious form of a man over the rough pavements behind them.

The horses were stopped at Superior street, and the man, who was horribly bruised and semi-unconscious, was released. The reins were around his body, under his arms, where he had probably placed them when the horses took fright, that he might better hold them in. The animals started to run away out near Bancroft street. On Cherry they tore loose from the wagon and dragged the occupant, August Feirstnon, to the ground. He struck heavily and was stunned. They had dragged him several blocks before they were stopped.

McGlynn's ambulance was called and the injured man was taken to St. Vincent's hospital. The doctors fear that he will not live. He is horribly bruised and is injured internally.

Mr. Feirstnon is a farmer living at Williston.

WANTED TO GIVE HIMSELF UP.

Ready to Sacrifice Honor for Woman's Attentions.

The well dressed young fellow with a diamond scarf pin insisted upon seeing the chief personally. No ordinary detective would do him. His business was of the first importance, and he persevered until he stood in the presence of the head of the force, says the Detroit Tribune

"Well, sir, what can we do for you?"

The chief was very busy, and the young fellow's deliberation irritated him.

"You will favor me by being quick."

The youth looked mysterious, drew a chair softly to the desk, and placed his lips close to the ear of the official.

"Not so loud," he hoarsely whispered.

An expression of mingled astonishment and disgust swept across the chief's face.

"What do you want?"

"I want to surrender myself."

The young fellow stared very hard. He seemed to think he had made a sensational announcement.

"Well?"

"I say, I want to surrender myself."

The chief wiped his glasses and thought and his stern look softened a little.

"What have you done?" he inquired, casually scrutinizing his visitor.

The fellow with the diamond scarf pin carelessly crossed his legs, directed his glance through the window, and laughed in a knowing way.

"That's for you to find out," he loftily retorted.

"We've something else to do. Good day."

The young man's face fell noticeably.

"Do you mean to say that I ain't wanted for something?"

The chief shook his head.

"And you have no directions to arrest a man of my description?"

"No."

"Better look on your books and be sure. This is an important matter."

"I know without looking."

"And you don't want me?"

"No."

"And I can't surrender myself?"

"Not at the present showing."

There was nothing lofty about his air now. In a very subdued, quiet way he pondered.

"Mister."

An amused smile lighted up the chief's countenance.

"I guess you're onto me."

The chief nodded.

You know I haven't done anything to be arrested for."

"Of course I know it."

He rose slowly, buttoned his coat and sighed.

"It was a great scheme if it had only worked."

The officer lost his patience.

"What do you mean?" he demanded.

"I've a good mind to arrest you as a vag."

"No, no, not that, not that. Arrest me for burglary or murder, but not as a vag. I am trying to get popular with the young ladies of the flower mission. You would greatly assist me by locking me up for something terrible, but as a vag? No, no, that would spoil it all.

In terror the young man with the diamond scarf pin fled the place.

HOW TO BATHE.

Get Health and Strength from the Exercise.

Some Hints from a Good Source That Are Timely at Present.

Very few people know how to bathe, and few bathe sufficiently. Many would like to bathe more than they do, but two things prevent. First, they are busy and have little time to spare; next, their work tires them, and they are afraid to lessen their strength and vitality by too free use of soap and water, and some have no bathroom.

Get enough Turkish toweling by the yard (you can get remnants) to make two pairs of thumbless mittens just large enough to slip over the thumb, and allow the hand to stretch flat, also a large, rough towel and a generous supply of tepid water, and, of course, soap, and either another towel to stand on or a piece of oilcloth four feet square.

It is very important to have a warm room so that the body may not be chilled when you doff your garments. After taking everything off stand on the oil-cloth or towel in front of your basin, slip your mittens on, dip them in the water, squeeze the drip from the mittens, soap well and rub the body all over, beginning at the neck and ending with the toes. Take off the mittens, lay them down beside the basin; all the soap of the body will be in those mittens. Take your second pair of mittens, slip them on and go over your body again, rinsing the mittens several tims, thus: Take the soap off the arms, then rinse the waist, and so forth. Bathing thus rests and strengthens the tired body.

After getting most of the soap off—Dr. Dio Lewis says "it will not injure you to leave a little soap on the skin"—slip off your second pair of mittens and rinse them out well, then wring them as dry as you can and rub the drips off your body. The damp mitts will not only dry the body, but it is wonderful the friction they produce and how they open the pores of the skin. Then dry with the aforesaid rough towel, which seems almost unnecessary, but that last dry rub gives an after glow.

Dr. C. Wesley Emerson, in his wonderful lectures on "The Health of the Brain," says that "it is important to the brain to dry the body with two towels after bathing," in which case the second rub with the damp mittens may be omitted.

It takes from eight to ten minutes to wash from top to toe, and to rinse the mittens in a second water, ready for another day. It is well to put them in the air to sweeten, and have them boiled once a week to keep them pleasant.

Invalids should wash a portion of their bodies at a time, and dry; but, of course, to wash piecemeal takes more time.

To improve the complexion one should keep the pores of the skin open and keep away the chaps. Wash the face and ears with very hot water and then put sufficient cold water to make it tepid for the body. The face should be washed in hot water at least three times daily.—Boston Herald.

The Presidents by Comparison.

This is the first time in the history of the republic that two men who have been presidents are opposing candidates for the same high office. Necessarily the discussions of the campaign will turn upon their respective administrations. Whatever has been done by either party, in congress, by office holders, individually or as a class, will be charged to the account of the president, and, as the chief of his party, he will be held responsible. The campaign will be one of comparisons, and the people will be able during the next four months to decide which of the two candidates, and which of the two political parties, is the better to administer the government of the United States.

This situation is just what the democrats desire. The policies, principles, and purposes of the parties must be discussed, and the appeal to the millions of voters must obtain a verdict of fairness. There are subjects, and sub-divisions of subjects, enough to occupy the whole campaign. American politics will be better for the discussion.

Upon the sectional question the Cleveland administration will present a record of unexampled prosperity and progress, and the up-building of the reconstructed south. Against this the republicans will present the issue of the force bill, the most infamous and un-American measure of recent politics.

Upon the land question the Cleveland administration will present the honest endeavor and the accomplishment of reclaiming millions of acres of the public domain to actual settlers. Against this the republican party must defend its record of giving away more acres than all the occupied farms in the United States, and the absolute neglect of this subject by the Harrison administration.

Upon the tariff question the Cleveland administration presents the effort, through the medium of the Mills bill, to revise the customs taxes in the interest of home industry, expansive trade and individual benefit of equalized and fair laws. Against this the republican party must stand upon the McKinley law, which was made by the classes for the classes; for the monopolist, and against the consumer.

Upon the financial question the Cleveland administration presents the balance sheets of an overflowing treasury, which the republicans must meet with depleted vaults and false balances to prevent an approach to government bankruptcy.

Upon the question of civil service the Cleveland administration shows an honest intention of making a public office a public trust, against which the republican party shows the unparalleled example of a cabinet officer posing because of the money he paid to elect Mr. Harrison, and the sacrifice of the offices upon the altar of party greed.

Upon these and other questions the discussion will be sharp and decisive. There will be little need to go to platform platitudes for forecasts of what the parties will do. It is a question of what they have done—what the candidates, each of whom has been president, will do, judged by what they have done. Upon this feature of the campaign the democrats take up their work with confidence in the result, and invite the most thorough discussion. The mud slinger is out of a job. It will be a campaign of comparisons and contrasts, a squaring of methods by principles, a recurrence to the best work of the political parties, a campaign of education.

Third Partyism.

The aggregated grievances of the people which found victory in political appeal in Kansas and South Carolina, two years ago, have stimulated the work of third or new partyism. Like the boy's snow ball it has rolled into large proportions, and the discordant elements promise to combine into intelligent expression at the Omaha convention, to be held next week. Very likely Judge Walter Q. Gresham, of the United States circuit court, will be nominated for president. In the present campaign his personality will stand for more votes than the cause itself. He is a representative American citizen, a republican, who, as the republican candidate for president, would command greater support than Benjamin Harrison. His nomination at Omaha will signify the disintegration of the republican party. If he does not carry a state this year he will receive so many republican votes in several states as to lose them to the republican candidate. The movement may throw the election into the House of Representatives, which means the election of Mr. Cleveland.

The industrial problem is felt by the individual and is no less an issue now than was slavery before the war between the states. The issue will be determined by the battles of ballots, no less potent and far reaching in results than the battles of bullets. The immediate result will be the destruction of the party that is directly responsible for the conditions which oppress industry and disgrace American civilization. Through the discussions of the new party and the destruction of the republican party the principles of the confederation of states into the republic, and the landmarks of freedom, and liberty of man, mind, conscience and labor, the eternal principles of Jeffersonian democracy, must stand out in bolder, clearer, better relief. All that is good in government springs from democracy, and the closer it is identified with the principles of the makers of the government the better for the country. All that has been and is foreign to American institutions is combined in the Opposition, hence it is that at irregular periods the opposition re-forms on new lines, and approaches the fountain head of free, fair and honest government for inspiration for the individual and the masses. Not sufficiently progressed to adopt unadulterated and undefiled democracy, yet getting back closely to first principles and starting out with bright banners of hope and promise and expectation, the new party commences its work.

Democracy alone and only lives in this country, unchanged and unchangeable. Its teachings are the essence of freedom, the life of creation itself.

Third partyism will help democracy this year.

Alas, Poor Stanley.

Poor Stanley; with his fame as an explorer of the dark continent, the discoverer of savage tribes, the intrepid, the undaunted in the midst of the indescribable dangers of the African jungle—he tried to make a tory speech in North Lambeth, Saturday, where he is tory aspirant for parliamentary honors, and so weak was he, the sneers and jeers of his listeners and Madame Dorothy tugging at his coat tails sat him down in abject confusion and failure. But women electioneer in England is a way scarcely yet thought of in America. Mistress Stanley arose in place of her discomfited husband, and told the North Lambeth countrymen that "Stanley is the greatest man in the world; he has done noble things for his country and would do more. He wants to extend your commerce. Vote for him, and not for him alone, but for yourselves and your interests, for he is a great and good man. I do not say this because I am Mrs. Stanley, but because it is true."

Hurrah for Dorothy. It is said she has made more votes for Henry in the slums of Lambeth that he will be able to turn away by his unfortunate speechifying. Alas, poor Stanley, the halo of romance and heroism pales before such ineffectual attempt at lesser things. Stanley, the American explorer, as Stanley, the tory candidate in a back district! How blinded men become. Some of them die too soon for their full fame; others live too long.

Two Questions.

Odd, isn't it? When "the foreigner pays the tax" and protective duty lowers the price of goods to the consumer that by special acts, duty is removed from articles on special occasions like the rebuilding of flooded Johnstown. Why is this done?

And why is a rebate paid the manufacturer, equal to the tax on the imported raw material he uses, if the other fellow has paid the tax and his goods are cheaper in consequence?

Ex-Governor Flower nobly says, "In union there is strength and with strength alone can success be obtained. We forget factional feeling and will work earnestly for Cleveland's election." Wise decision. What would any faction of the democracy gain by opposing the nominee of a regular democratic convention? Cleveland's election without New York would forever set aside the state—no longer "Empire." Cleveland will be elected and New York would better be "in it."

The N. Y. Recorder has a fearful count against Cleveland: the daughter of one of his cabinet officers married Joseph Chamberlain, and the Recorder wouldn't be surprised if Joseph "will cable him his felicitations." Mercy, won't somebody head off Joe. Such a jab as this at the opening of the campaign is dreadful.

Says the Cleveland Leader, "retaliation upon Canada should be made as severe as possible." The Toronto Empire quotes the saying as a specimen of what is meant by the reciprocity part of the McKinley law.

Chauncey Depew declines the office of secretary of state, ostensibly because it is too much of a financial sacrifice, but really because he doesn't want a job that promises to run out next March. President Cleveland will have no use for Chauncey.

Massachusetts democrats are hopeful that the Old Bay State will fall in line to swell Cleveland's electoral vote. Eastern republicans are inclined to Folgerize Mr. Harrison.

Judge Gresham is good for 20,000 republican votes in Indiana. Even Dudley's blocks of five couldn't stand against those figures.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Mr. McKinley is supposed to have tried hard not to be nominated at Minneapolis. He succeeded, but received so many votes that hard-headed and hard-hearted men said that he was not sincere. Republican decliners who are in earnest hereafter may learn a good deal from the words and actions of William C. Whitney and Senator Palmer. —New York World (Dem.)

The only debate in honest democrats' minds was whether the divisions in New York were so serious as to render difficult or doubtful of success the ex-president's election in November. This question has been fully and fairly considered by the clear-headed men among democracy's leaders and the verdict is unanimously declared that Cleveland can be and will be elected the twenty-fourth president of the United States. In this decision the Times cheerfully and fully acquiesces.—Buffalo Times (Dem.)

There will be no sulking over the result at Chicago among the men who have stood by the senator from New York with such loyalty and determination. A two-thirds vote of the national democratic convention is obligatory, and will be ratified at the ballot-box by every loyal democrat everywhere, and especially in the state of New York. The democracy of New York will do their full measure of duty.—Albany Times (Dem.)

The republican press and leaders predict that during the campaign Mr. Cleveland will be knifed in the house of his friends, meaning of course the state of New York, but these birds of ill omen are destined to be disappointed. The ex-president has grown stronger in the public estimation every hour since his nomination, and he will continue to do so until he is once more seated in the executive chair at the white house. The platform of which he is the exponent and representative is at once direct and emphatic, and forcibly appeals to the judgment of conservative citizens. The political question is largely one of measures.—New York News (Dem.)

The Post is in favor of a campaign of education. The issue before the people is between the principle of protection on one hand and that of tariff "for revenue only" on the other. To make the discussion of the issue resultful in the best sense, it is not only necessary that it be approached and carried on in a spirit of fairness and honesty, but that it be rid of all confusing terms and verbage.—Washington Post (Ind.)

There is one fact about the Chicago convention that is likely to leave a lasting favorable impression upon the country. There were no charges of bribery there. The circumstance that there were no such charges is a proof that there was no such fact. Had there been any ground for allegations of bribery, allegations of bribery would certainly have been made.—New York Telegram (Dem.)

Any member of the Massachusetts Civil Service Reform League who supports a presidential ticket bearing the name of such a man as Stevenson deserves to be immediately expelled by unanimous vote of the organization. The democrats and mugwumps in this body have an excellent opportunity to demonstrate that their professions amount to something.—Boston Journal (Rep.)

Whatever the opinion of voters may be as to the personal characteristics of Mr. Harrison or Mr. Cleveland, the sober judgment of all intelligent men and proper members of society is that they have conducted themselves with becoming dignity in office and in social life during their incumbency in accordance with the manner in which they have been true to the traditions of the country.—St. Louis Star-Sayings (Rep.)

RAILROADS AND OIL.

Various Organizations to Meet in the Bee Building.

News on the Rail of Local Interest.

The Toledo Passenger Committee to Meet—Sand from Toledo—Going to New York—Other Matters.

The oil committee of the Central Traffic association at the last meeting recommended and it was adopted, that the advance rate of 25 cents per 100 pounds on oil agreed to from the Ohio oil fields, including Toledo, to Duluth, Ashland, Superior, West Superior, and Marquette via Mackinaw be also applied via the same route to St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The committee recommended, and it was adopted, that the present authorized practice of deducting 42 gallons from the shell capacity of petroleum tanks be discontinued Consequently hereafter the full shell capacity of tanks carrying petroleum oil and its products shall be charged for.

It was also decided that the weight of crude petroleum and its products in tank cars be estimated at 6 4-10 pounds per gallon instead of 6 3-10 pounds as at present.

As soon as these changes have been approved by the joint committee a new tank gauge book will be issued, showing only the car number and the gross capacity of each tank in gallons and the weight in pounds based upon the new basis of 6 4-10 pounds per gallon.

It is agreed that tar and residuum products of petroleum should be added to and shown in the official classification as taking the same rates as oil, petroleum, etc.

New Place of Meeting.

Wednesday or Thursday of this week the Toledo Car Service association and the Toledo Joint Rate inspection bureau will remove into their new quarters on the second floor of the Bee building.

Heretofore the various railway organizations in this vicinity have had no general or regular place of meeting, but now convenient and pleasant quarters will be fitted up for them, with chairs, long tables, etc. Room 12 will be used for this purpose. The various organizations that will meet there are the Car Service association, the Toledo freight committee, the Toledo and Detroit Superintendents' association, the Toledo Freight Agents' association, the Master Car Builders' association, the Toledo passenger committee, the Master Mechanics' association, and all other railway organizations.

One Thousand Toledoans.

A large number of people will go from Toledo on the Y. P. S. C. E. excursion to New York July 5 to 7. Sleepers are rapidly filling up. The Lake Shore will have seven sleepers; the Michigan Central three and the Wheeling & Lake Erie two, out of Toledo. Ticket men estimate that 1,000 Toledoans will take advantage of the low rates.

Rates on Peaches.

The railroads in this territory have been authorized by the freight committee to publish commodity rates on peaches, carloads, minimum weight 20,000 pounds, on the basis of second class.

Sand from Toledo.

The Toledo Freight committee has been authorized to publish a rate of 50 cents per ton on lake and building sand, in carloads, from Toledo to Tiffin in order to meet the same rates published from Sandusky.

Cinders Here and There.

General Manager J. M. Ferris, of the Ohio Central lines, went to Cleveland this morning.

Division Freight Agent J. M. Osborn, of the Wabash, went down the line this morning.

President S. R. Calloway, of the Toledo, St. Louis & Kansas City railroad, leaves for the east to-night.

P. Monks, agent of the Blue Line at Toledo, and T. J. McCarthy, agent of the Merchants' Despatch, have returned from Chicago.

A meeting of the Toledo passenger committee will be held at the Boody house to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, to consider some excursion rates to Toledo.

The lines in the Central Traffic association will urge upon the trunk lines the adoption of inspection of lake traffic as the failure to inspect competetive traffic going by lake is a discrimination against the lines in the association.

The Michigan Central asked the Central Traffic association for authority to establish all rail rates from Buffalo to East St. Louis 10 per cent. higher than the rates in effect from time to time via the lake and rail routes. The application was not granted.

A BANK IN TROUBLE.

Goshen, N. Y., National Closes Its Doors.

The Government Authorities Have Made Disclosures Which May Furnish a Sensation.

Newburg, N. Y., June 27.—A dispatch from Goshen states that the Goshen National bank has closed its doors.

Cashier Murray, who is also county treasurer, did not make his appearance this morning, and it is rumored that he has absconded.

Cashier Murray returned from New York Sunday night. He has been absent from home since Wednesday. He has shown signs of mental derangement for some time.

The national bank examiner called the attention of the authorities of the bank to the unsatisfactory condition of the books of the bank, and also the bad loans made in a number of instances.

Murray is the county treasurer of Orange county. It is asserted, however, that the public funds of the county are in the hands of a New York trust company. It is hard to learn anything in regard to the affairs of the bank, but it is believed the surplus has disappeared and that its capital is impaired.

THE BUFFALO BANK.

Warrant Sworn Out for an ex-Official.

Government Agents Think Mr. Dann Must Have Had an Accomplice.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 25.—The depositors of the National Savings bank are now after Treasurer Dann's accomplices.

Notwithstanding that the bank examiners stated positively that other employes of the bank must have stood in with Dann, or at least have known of his crooked transactions, the bank officials have made no movement toward placing these people under arrest.

Saturday a depositor quietly swore out a warrant for the arrest of ex-Teller Wm. McCready, who left the employe of the bank about a year ago.

McCready went down the river Saturday afternoon and had not returned up to this morning. His whereabouts are unknown.

The warrant charges him with grand larceny.

Dann has placed in the hands of the bank officials $45,000 in cash and securities and his friends say he will turn over other property to the bank as fast as it can be transferred. The examiners resumed their investigation of the accounts this morning, but say it will be three weeks before the work will be completed.

Forty-four million oysters were landed in England and Wales in 1891 against something under 37,000,000 in 1889.

Cleveland.

Cleveland, June 27.—Ore freights are steady at $1.10 from Ashland, 95c from Escanaba and 70c from Escanaba. There is strong demand to-day for Ashland boats, but only fair from Escanaba. No charters have as yet been made at 65c for coal to Lake Michigan, but the tendency is in that direction.

Chicago.

Chicago, June 27.—Grain freights continued dull, but unchanged. The movement is likely to be light all this week, from to-day's indications.

Buffalo.

Buffalo, June 27.—The boats arriving yesterday to some extent relieved the demands of shippers for Lake Michigan tonnage, and the vesselmen gave up hopes of an immediate advance and are taking considerable room this morning at the old arates. Charters: Samoa, Arizona, Plymouth, to Chicago, 60; Rome, Iroquois, to Milwaukee, 60; Livingston, to Duluth, 35c; Pawnee, Edwards, Orton, Young, to Green Bay, 60; St. Peter, Comanche, Hammond, to Toledo, 25c.

LOCAL MARINE NEWS.

The Flora arrived in this morning and will take out a big freight cargo.

To-morrow evening the Machine Woodworkers' union go on the Pastime to Turtle light, and a good time is expected.

The steamers Douglas and Messenger ran to Monroe yesterday, and both did a handsome business.

The City of Toledo takes the Cycling club and its friends on a moonlight ride to-morrow night.

The beautiful little steamer Visitor, of Put-in-Bay, was a visitor at this port to-day.

The passengers on the Idlewild from Detroit yesterday had a stormy passage home, and many were seasick.

The up-river business is booming, and both the Burt and Wallace had about all they could handle yesterday.

The fine fishing at Monroe brings the boats plenty of business just now.

THREE RIVERS RATIFIES.

Three Rivers, Mich., June 27.—Editor Bee—Three Rivers was painted red, white and blue on Saturday night. Some two weeks ago a few heartsick republicans met up town and listened to two or three pieces played by the band, went into a hall and listened to some speeches and went home and called it a ratification meeting. Last night a brass field piece shook the foundations of the town about twenty times and for an hour and a half the town was ablaze with a beautiful display of fireworks, and the streets were jammed with crowds of men and women, gathered to rejoice with those who rejoice, to witness the pyrotechnic display and enjoy the grand music of both the brass band and a string orchestra. Then there were speeches and a grand time in general. There can be no comparison between the two demonstrations.

Native Christians are increasing in India, at least in the northwest province of Oude, for which we have statistics. There are 22,065 this year, against 13,263 at their last census. More than half belong to the Methodist Episcopal church. The church of England has only 5,013 and the Roman Catholic 1,016.

WAKE UP.

If you wake up in the morning with a bitter or bad taste in your mouth, Languor, Dull Headache, Despondency, Constipation, take Simmons Liver Regulator. It corrects the bilious stomach, sweetens the breath and cleanses the furred tongue. Children as well as adults sometimes eat something that does not digest well, producing Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Restlessness, or Sleeplessness—a good dose of Regulator will give relief. So perfectly harmless is this remedy that it can be taken by the youngest infant or the most delicate person without injury, no matter what the condition of the system may be. It can do no harm if it does no good, but its reputation for 40 years proves it never fails in doing good.

THE CLASS OF NINETY-TWO.

RETROSPECTIVE VIEW,

As Well as a Little Peer Into the Future,

By Members Whose Cogitations Run That Way.

Miss Edith Coder, Mr. Will Carr, Miss Gertrude Knights and Miss Lalla Miller Take Up Their Pens to Let You Know, Etc.

On Saturday the Bee printed a full report of the graduating exercises of the high school class of '92, but the record would be incomplete without the other features connected with the same. Some three weeks since the annual class day was observed and at this meeting the duly elected officers submitted papers appropriate to their station, which provoked much favorable comment. In answer to requests for the publication of the same, they are appended, and while they occupy considerable space, the perusal will undoubtedly be pleasing to the members and their friends. The history is by Miss Edith Coder, the poem by Miss Gertrude Knights, the toast, "Our Alma Mater" by Miss Lalla Miller, and the prophecy by Mr. Will Carr.

"Swing inward, ye gates of the future,
Swing outward, ye gates of the past."

There are many, many classes of literature in the world, and among these is one which I dislike; I will whisper it low, for the teachers are here, and such a shock to them might prove dangerous, because teachers, as we all know, are not ordinary beings; oh, no! they belong to a class not inferior to the gods of old, whose very frown struck terror into human breasts, and blighted many a life.

For this is a history, the class of literature so distasteful to me; so I can heartily sympathize with those who dislike an uninteresting line of events made more somber by an anecdote here and there, which, in another place, would prove pleasant, but here only seems to cry out in a mournful, wailing voice, "Study me, study me, and seek my hidden truth." And truth is an unknown sea to me; the gray cliffs whence it derives its forbidding undaunt me, as shuddering, I venture near, and even Oneida has lulled me to dreamland, as I struggled with superhuman power to look into the depths of her thought.

So I forgive you, my friends, if you listen with unhearing ears, like the idols of old, while I relate, to the sleepy nod, nod of your heads, the history of the Class of '92.

It was under September's genial rays, nearly three years ago, when, into the picturesque, weather-beaten old High school yonder entered a reluctant crowd of boys and girls; even you, oh teachers, still at this festive board seeking more truth will scarcely recollect anything of them.

Before me is a faint, dim vision of a well-filled school-room; a remembrance of long, hot days in which the future Class of '92 learned for itself one of the bitterest lessons of its life in the fact that Toledo High school is not the Liberty hall of its imagination; the flies, buzzing on the walks, awakened desires of murder in the hearts of the irritated pupils, and they proceeded to carry them out, as their algebra and physiology could testify; they made over man to their own perfect satisfaction a thousand times, sometimes placing his heart in his brain, again having it out entirely. And Miss Samuels, a courageous, sweet young teacher, was so worried and tormented by a number of impudent young students, who desired to enjoy themselves, under pretense of studying Latin, that at the end of the year she got married, rather than teach again, accepting marriage as the lesser of two evils.

Of course many amusing incidents happened in one way or another, and if some kind-hearted fairy had only whispered to me that at a later date I would honor the class by recalling and writing its history, a dainty little note-book should have ever been in my hands; yes, even though I, a junior, would have fallen under the foul suspicion of writing notes; the idea of juniors using their precious time to indite forbidden epistles, the teachers and even the pupils might well be disgusted at such a waste, so instead we whispered.

For one thing we organized; somehow, as a class, we always got our way, and a president, vice-president, and other aides were the result of our union; Mr. Jay Secor made a stately, dignified president, but, possessing that most excellent thing in women, a sweet, low voice, he did not here more than half the class at a time, when speaking on matters of business; the rest of us went to sleep, and after the meeting our obliging friends told us of what had been said; all the other officers whom we selected were a credit to the class; our good judgment in such matters is not to be surpassed.

We had a social, too, that was a memorable event and will forever be quoted as a model for all other classes to follow; we had a fine band, a fine hall, a fine attendance, and a fine was levied on all who graced the hall with their presence. It was a success, though I was not there; perhaps, truthfully, I could hardly assert so much for it, if I had been, as some one hinted to me that Maumee river water and Maumee mud formed the chief dishes on the menu; I would not listen any further, the dignity of this class must be sustained; oh, for the power to punish such misinformers.

Certainly the principal event of the year occurred during the last of June, when we, who are present, with a few others, were notified that we might pass up to the Middler grade, and down to the Middler room.

And at last we are Middlers; ahem! the honor scarcely seemed so great as we had imagined, for the Middler class, too, had advanced and our position did not free us from their taunting remarks; still, we could disturb the complacent, self-respect of the Juniors; and then, the lessons were harder; actually they expected us to work, and we were not used to such a thing, I assure you. For example, Mr. Ballou, our worthy Latin teacher, considered it our duty to know all the rules, and exceptions to the rules, and exceptions to the exceptions to the rules that are in the Latin grammar, and when we had completely undeceived him on that score, he supposed we would study them; but we fooled him, and I will whisper it confidentially, but he fooled us when he gave us our marks, and then refused to alter them; that was carrying the joke too far.

And then there was Mr. Dowd; he was a splendid edition of Miss Samuels over again, only with not half the pluck; somehow men never are so brave and enduring as women; Mr. Dowd was our newest and latest amusement; what a year we planned for him, poor man, when to our indignation, to this day I believe somebody turned traitor, the man quietly went away without even asking our permission. And then Mr. Richmond came; you never have seen such meek pupils as those physics classes were within two days after the advent of this new professor; I have almost forgotten how to laugh, and even to-night many show the effects of last year, as can be seen by the mirthless countenances of some present.

I have very much regretted, during the past two years, the departure of Mr. Dowd, since within that time I have heard from a college companion of his a joke so good that even though he is not here to enjoy it, I must tell it to-night; he was to deliver an oration and was one day receiving the following advice, as she passed him: "And when you have finished your oration," said the professor to Mr. Dowd, "bow gracefully, and leave the platform on tip-toes." "Why on tip-toes?" queried Mr. Dowd, thirsting for information. "So as not to wake the audience," was the reply.

As is usual in the Middler year, officers were chosen; Tom Ainsworth was elected president, but coolly gave up the office, and Ralph Brown accepted the trust; plainly, either the work was too great for their delicate constitutions, or the pecuniary remuneration was too small, and the latter is the more probable, as both boys have left the class and accepted positions; and I advise all future classes to remember and shun our example; a poorly paid set of employes is no credit to a flourishing community.

Again we indulged in that wildest of dissipations known to the school youth, a social. The Seniors, elated at their coming freedom, and remembering their early, and seemingly very few lessons in Ethics, resolved to be benevolent, not selfish, and entertained at their own expense, both Middlers and Juniors, and, strange to say, the three classes never before were so large as on that evening, embracing, as they did, persons from twelve to sixty years of age.

Perhaps something ought to have been said about the teachers before this, forming, as they do, the center of all our interest; very probably they cannot realize with what anxiety we have watched their slightest movements; how carefully we have refrained from speaking, when very near them, that half-forgotten maxim of our childhood, "Children should be seen, but not heard," rising before us then; they were always pleasant, particularly when they found us diligently reading our books upside down; their admiration for our proficiency at such times they could not properly express; they were obliging, in permitting us to go down-stairs precisely as we wished, and in always marking our special enemies lower than ourselves. I am willing to repeat it again and again, we are truly blessed in our teachers, and as for our principal, don't you think Oliver Goldsmith had in mind just such a man when he wrote these, to us well-known lines:

"A man severe he was, and stern to view,
I know him well, and every truant knew;
Well had the boding tremblers learned to trace
The day's disasters in his morning face;
Full well they laughed with counterfeited glee
At all his jokes, for many a joke had he;
Full well the busy whisper, circling round,
Conveyed the dismal tidings when he frowned;
Yet he was kind, or if severe in aught,
The love he bore to learning was in fault.
The village all declared how much he knew;
'Twas certain he could write, and cipher, too;
Lands he could measure, terms and tides presage,
And even the story ran that he could guage.
In arguing, too, the parson owned his skill,
For e'en though vanquished, he could argue still;
While words of learned length, and thund'ring sound
Amazed the gazing rustics ranged around,
And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew,
That one small head should carry all he know."

But I have heard something lately which scarcely confirms my quotation, although the slight mistake was due to the environment; it seems the dignified law-giver of our school wished, not long ago, to use the horse of a friend, so of course he went over to get it. No hostler being near at hand, and as our friend was in a hurry, he himself proceeded to saddle it; while engaged in his lofty occupation in come a number of children, one of whom, Bertram, was the small master of the house; "Why, Bertram," said a little fellow, opening wide his eyes as he gazed upon our principal, "has your father got a new groom?"

As no history would be complete without some mention of those grand heroes, who, at the risk of their lives, all have valiantly fought for their country, so do you, my friends, deserve mention, you, who have zealously fought against that almost invincible desire of too much pleasure; who have besieged that fortress of Geometry, well-guarded by rough, surly fellows called axioms and theorisms, and so only to be won by constant plotting in the still, cold hours of the night, and the bright ones of the day; you who have thrust your responsibilities unto others by triumphantly gaining a victory over the mysteries of psychological problems and so proving that we are victims of fates. You are truly worthy of your great ancestors (a few of whom I shall mention).

Bertha Hood, for example, is the granddaughter of the famous poet, Thomas Hood; John Wesley Wuerfel is the direct descendant of the founder of Methodism, not only by name, but because, like all Johnson has for ancestors the famous Methodists, he never even smiles; Florence Johnson has for her ancestors the famous Samuel and Ben Johnson, in whose footsteps she is faithfully following; Herbert Whitney shows the inventive powers of his well-known progenitor, Eli Whitney, by passing through school without much labor; Edward Marshall's illustrious forefather, Edward III., was the conquerer in the great battle of Crecy; Mr. Marshall will scarcely be so successful in his battle with the world unless he discards that graceful languor that characterizes his movements; also unless he changes his favorite motto, "Never do to-day, what can be done to-morrow." Alice Alexander is plainly related to Alexander the Great in her capacity for conquering study. But the pupil whose ancestors are among the most numerous and most beautiful in the world; whose cousins are the pale violets; whose aunts are the peerless daffodils; whose grand parents are the king and queen of the earth, the haughty sunflower and the dainty rose; she who can readily trace her noble lineage back to the olive-leaf, which the patient dove bore to the waiting Noah; who in a perfect whole combines the qualities of all, is Miss Gertrude Weed. But, knowing that Mr. Carr will do full justice to the members of the class in his prophecy, and believing that he must be very anxious to read it, I will hasten on.

I wonder how many of us realized as again in September, '91, we gathered together, slightly decreased as to numbers, that it was for the last time; the recent death of our class-mate, Clara Bourdo, and the terrible heat, consumed all our thoughts; oh, but it was warm, the thermometer averaging 250 degrees in the shade; but we heroically endured it, for a blissful whisper was circling round, comforting all whom it reached. At last our highest hopes were realized, when the morning paper blazoned forth the fact that those cool-blooded men, the board of education, had at last perceived that it was somewhat warm, and so had consented to close the schools; alas! the next day, truly the fates are against pupils, or are in league with the long-suffering mothers, the thermometers, under the intense cold of 200 degrees below zero, had dropped till they were tired of dropping.

And by this time all sentiment was crushed by the coolness of the atmosphere; we studied to keep warm, and, I assure you, it was very often necessary, the natural gas taking more holidays in a term than we ever dared, and then no one ever thought of asking it for excuses.

Oh! the unutterable monotony of the school year; we would have grown immeasurably weary, had it not been for our pleasant class meetings, and the differences of opinion thereby invoked, and the heated discussions after the meetings; selecting a class-pin and a caterer assumed gigantic proportions; we chose a motto, "Perserverando Vince," which few can pronounce, and fewer will remember more than a year; you selected from a class, remarkable in the art of composition, a poet, prophet, and historian, which selection, I pray, you will never regret; you selected a president, Ralph Collamore, whose talents and literary ability, and chiefly his gift of diplomacy, fit him to be president of something greater than the Class of '92, though I really don't know what is greater except the United States, and that is so only in area.

But perhaps most of the members of the class showed their good taste when they refrained from working and gaining high marks in order that Miss Sophie Mery might be valedictorian; Mr. Orr, salutatorian; Miss Alexander, Miss Marx and the other six might help to form the "magic ten."

Especially were we fortunate in the case of the valedictory, which Miss Mery is well able to undertake because of a certain nameless power she possesses of rendering the most wearisome subjects interesting; we are all waiting with a great deal of badly suppressed impatience for the pleasure of listening to her; and seem to see, on a not far distant night, an audience, forgetful for a short time of the heat and poor ventilation of the theater, leaning forward eagerly to lose nothing of a certain essay, and when it is ended, all too soon, both young and old will make the building ring with warm, hearty approval of valedictorian and valedictory.

Perhaps had this unselfishness not been carried to an extreme degree by enthusiastic scholars, many of whom willingly absented themselves from the class, our number might have been greater to-night; many a face is absent for which we yearn; and one of our teachers, for whom we mourn in vain, has left us forever. Her's was a beautiful life, nobly, unselfishly lived, and those to whom self is ever dearest have learned such a lesson from the uncomplaining burdened little teacher, as they shall never forget; oh, pardon us, ye heavenly powers, who in our blind ignorance and egotism have added some share to her sufferings.

In the future years, my friends, when luxuriously furnished buildings are erected for the devotees of the goddess of learning, with elevators to convey the pupils from floor to floor, easy lounging chairs to rest the toil-worn student, counting machines to do all calculating, patent grubbing hoes to dig out Greek and Latin roots, new steam plows to cultivate the minds, nickel-plated tooth-extractors to draw out thoughts, patent weighing machines to be sure that neither more or less information is given than is positively necessary, and long-handled shovels to delve into books, we will look back with a sigh to the days when we were expected to be content with the old-fashioned, plodding way of doing things for ourselves; when we, discontented, were obliged to attend school all the best hours of the day just because the board of education couldn't possibly remember that they were once boys; somehow all public officials have conveniently bad memories.

And with all the hardships that we have unmurmuringly borne, with all the narrowness of our lot, we the Class of '92, have steadily advanced, as we shall continue to do in the future, from boundary to boundary of our great republic, the words, a member of the "Class of '92," will gain for each one of us respect and admiration, and open to us the highest honors of the land, in whatever vocation we find our life work; our names will be recorded in the annals of our country, and the inscriptions on our desks will be guarded more carefully than those of the highest men, for whom daily the civilized world gives thanks. Farewell, Class of '92, and I, one of your representatives to-night, wish for each one of you the highest, noblest success that the world can give, a proud name, fame, and glory, until to poet, to musician, to orator, to author, no higher theme can be than the Class of '92.

THE CLASS POEM.

Come, classmates, boys and girls of '92,
Clasp hands and while the last chance yet remains
Let us recall the years we journeyed through
And bind the memories with still closer chains.
Lest we in time forget the dear old school;
Lest newer cares and joys blot out the old;
Take heed, my words are weighty, as a rule,
And note the panorama I enfold.
Proud on the swelling bosom of the lawn
There stands a structure of majestic frame,
And tho' full many a class has come and gone,
That brave old edifice remains the same.
The lawn, where lights and shadows move and blend
Holds smiling flowers on its broad expanse,
And clustered trees their cooling shade extend,
A habitat for insects and for ants.
And yet e'en here ill fortune doth intrude,
For in these sylvan haunts no foot may pass;
No hands may pluck the buds with fingers rude,
A baleful sign stands guard, "Keep off the grass."
There was a time when comfort giving trees
And blossoming flowers were totally erased;
One looked in vain for vases of green,
His famished eye beheld a desert waste.
Adorning one side of this classic hall
There is a worn-out time-piece old and grim,
And toiling on its never-ending path
The tired, ancient hands move round the rim,
The bell rings out with clear and joyful sound
As sturdily as e'er in times of yore,
On cheery mornings and at sunny noons,
Just as it did full thirty years before.
'Twas three short years ago; a crowd of boys
And girls, a bright and overjoyous band,
First braved the perils of the Junior year,
Fluse sang in chorus, German Fatherland.
The arduous work begun, the days fled by,
Each study bravely conquered in its turn,
And slowly toiling on the upward path
Our spirits oft for praise (in marks) did yearn.
As winter bade to us a sad farewell
And we as yet no honor had attained
Some comfort from this saying was derived,
'Tis effort, not result, gives praise or blame.
The two short months of summer quickly passed
And autumn's warm, soft days came on apace;
With joy we entered on the winter's work
And welcomed back each dear familiar face.
As Middlers, so another year rolled by,
As Middlers, did we vainly work for fame;
The novelty the Junior year had inclosed
Had turned into a name, an empty name.
When we as Juniors in the footsteps trod
Of haughty Seniors, Middlers not a few,
We little thought, as we have learned to since,
'Tis distance lends enchantment to the view.
We've reached the goal at last, by hearty work,
'Tis thus we stand here with a Senior's right.
Look round you, classmates, meditate upon
The intellect that's gathered here to-night.
There have been times when school and heavy care
Were cast with quick and careless thought behind;
The theater, the giddy dance was used
To aid in culturing the growing mind.
'Tis almost over now, and as we think
That school days with their joys must pass away,
That dear friends now may be but stranger soon,
The sober thought must come and hold its sway.
Not future years can bring those mornings back
When gathered in that cheerful room to sing,
The Juniors, Middlers, Seniors, teachers, too,
Joined heart and voice and made the old room ring.
And now the hardest duty yet remains,
Oh! noble Seniors, do not angry be,
There are no words to give to you due praise,
At any rate, the time's too short, you see.
But to the members of the "upper ten,"
A few short words of praise we will let fall,
And for this purpose I have borrowed lines
That will express the sentiment of all.

Ode of Praise.

Hail to the Ten who have won such high glory,
Honored, applauded, be they for all time;
Long may their deeds be recorded in story,
Long may their names be recorded in rhyme.
Let all that's living, then
Echo their praise again,
Gladly let us give the praise that is due,
While every person here
Lends us a hearty cheer,
List to the honor you've won, '92.
Hail to the Ten who have conquered so nobly
Their earnest efforts have not been in vain.
Each day has seen them work steadily, truly,
Hoping at last worthy laurels to gain.
Ours is no common Ten.
They're far beyond our ken,
O that we'd garlands around them to twine,
Honor to their grand success,
Heaven will it ever bless,
O, class of '92, such praises be thine.
I prophesy a future clear and bright
For scholars, friends and teachers, these I call
The gods of old Olympus down to help,
I guess I've finished, yes, I'm sure; that's all.

OUR ALMA MATER.

Alma Mater! Loved shrine of thy children,
The '92s meet here to-night
To give thee their love and devotion,
To praise thy justice and right.

Three years have passed swiftly o'er us,
Since we entered thy portals so vast,
Determined to outshine all others,
Whose genius has brightened thy past.

Thy walls so white and stately,
Have watched o'er the lives of us each,
In silence have seen our successes,
In silence have seen our defeats.

They are dumb, yet proudly praising
Thy sons, twenty-seven, so noble and brave
Who followed where stern duty led them,
For no other reward but the grave.

We leave thee in hope that our hands
Something useful may find, to make
The lessons you've taught us so well
Live on for humanity's sake.

Thou who hast often in patience
Crossed our erring, youthful ways,
Shall forever be accorded
Our most earnest heartfelt praise.

Alma Mater, kind and loving,
Guide us still in paths of truth,
Forever be our guardian angel,
As in the days of happy youth.

Then farewell to thee, Alma Mater!
We still have the deep conviction
That our debt to thee must ever
Invoke Heaven's sweetest benediction.

PROPHECY OF THE CLASS OF '92.

I always did have a sneaking belief in ghosts, spooks and the like, and perhaps it was because my mind was thus prepared for the reception of positive proof, that at the proper and only time I was so easily put under their supernatural influences; for

"Once, upon a midnight, dreary,
As I pondered, weak and weary,
Over many a quaint and curious
Volume of forgotten lore.
While I nodded, nearly napping,
Suddenly there came a tapping,
As of some one gently rapping,
Rapping at my chamber door."

I arose and opened the door, and seeing nothing without, was about to consider the noise a fantasy, when blue sulphurous vapors began to close around me, and amid the wierd and terrible shapes they formed, a voice in tones of thunder roared loudly in my ears: "Wouldst thou, O venturesome spirit, lift the immortal veil that hides the future from the gaze of earth? Wouldst thou then see the misery, misfortunes and ephemeral joys bound to the lot of man? Then take this mystic potion and reveal to none the secret of thy prophecy."

Slowly, lingering yet about my startled eyes, the mysterious visitor departed. Upon my desk, stamped in cabalistic characters, lay the most longed for potion. With a trembling uncertainty as to the result, I resolved to do all, to dare all for my classmates.

Immediately was I transported to the mysterious future. Twenty years makes such a difference in the customs, modes, and cities of a country, that I hardly recognized the old familiar spots that memory brought to me, but was assured that everything was just as it would be in your coming future.

Ralph Collamore—As I was plodding along G street in Cincinnati one drizzly afternoon, I saw a one-horse shay approaching, and from under the nigh flap of the leather curtain, a pair of kindly blue eyes peered eagerly in my direction. After searching scrutiny, the gig was stopped suddenly, throwing the descendant of Maud S. on her haunches, and a mellow voice inquired: "Be you the Mr. Carr what I used to know?" I was puzzled for a moment, but when I reached the side of the carriage and obtained a closer look at its occupant I was very much pleased and surprised to shake hands with Doctor Ralph Collamore.

Mary Chapin—

A change of scene had the nurse prepared,
And sat me down just where she dared.
'Twas at a swell seaside resort,
Where the waves were roaring in wildest sport.
Anon at a wayside booth I stopped,
Where candy was sold and popcorn popped—
Where behind the counter with wondering gaze,
I beheld an acquaintance, and in a daze
I tripped lightly forward to claim as a friend,
One, whose thoughts long ago did higher tend.
What great wide changes in this world come about,
And put all our schemes and intentions to route,
For who would dare think, a booth she'd be kapein,
The nymph of our boyhood, the maid, Mary Chapin.

Katharine Day—At a recent presentation of Shakespeare's immortal Hamlet, the ghost possessed a remarkably heavy voice, and his solemn and terrible disclosures had great effect in causing shivers and shakes to chase each other up and down the backs of the appreciative audience. But in the scene where Hamlet requires Horatio and Marcellus to swear eternal secrecy, the rumbling tones that pronounced the ghost's dread command to "swear," came from no mortal man. The rafters seemed to re-echo the sound and the painted curtains almost rustled in the general agitation. After the play I ventured on the stage, and representing myself as a reporter, I learned that not even the ghost's voice was deep enough to give utterance to the oath, but that an actress in the company, Miss Katharine Day, pronounced the awe-inspiring word.

James J. France—

I stood in the hall of congress
As the clock was striking the hour,
And a senator was uttering
A speech of wondrous power.

When the last powerful words had been uttered
And the applause had at last died away,
James J. Franc came down to meet me,
And talked over the times of to-day.

Myrtle Chase—I have the honor among many and various chronicles to note the fact that a large number of our lady members are happily married. After leaving school, Miss Myrtle Chase prepared her bridal outfit and became the blushing and happy wife of her first love, upon which occasion a large number of her schoolmates were present, carrying their cast-off shoes.

Walter J. Monroe—As Chicago had increased to such an enormous size since my time, I naturally expected to find many acquaintances in this mecca of rising young Americans. As I strolled down Dearborn street I noticed on the second floor of a large office building several windows emblazoned with a strangely familiar name. A small boy with blue eyes and pug nose was idly gazing into vacancy across the word "lawyer" on the panes, and I recognized a likeness to two old friends. And sure enough, Mr. Walter Monroe ushered me into the sumptuous office with his usual quiet and unassuming manner, and earnestly desired me to go out and see his wife, pointing to the idle little lad as "our second," the oldest being a maiden by the name of "Mary," after her mother.

Maud Chollar—On the Main street of a small village in southern Ohio I noticed the legend, "Miss Maud Chollar, Modiste." The little sign was hung above the door of a very neat little cottage, and the well-kept garden and lawn spoke of a prosperous owner. So my mind set at ease in regard to this member of my class, I journeyed northward.

Florence Johnson—Married the coroner in a western town, and is now silent partner in an undertaking establishment. I promised her the job of laying me out, and have paid her husband the fee. He is happy when he can sit on a corpse, for his wife sits on him so often at home.

Lalla Miller—On the right hand of Cherry street, which is celebrated for its public buildings, stands a tall and narrow structure, plain and austere, which is a fit type of its occupants. It took a deal of courage to decide to enter here, but finally I summoned my mite of self-possession and was conducted by the aged doorkeeper into the presence of the Loreless High Mucky Muck of the institution. Lo! and behold! it was our slender acquaintance of many years ago, Miss Lalla Miller was the ruling spirit of the lately endowed "Old Maids' Retreat," and was beloved by all the inmates.

Miss Abbie M. Hitchcock—One of the strongest inducements that decided me to take the mystic potion was the desire to know in what way our literature teacher would pass her time when she finished teaching her school children in the mighty senior class of the T. H. S. Well, in front of a large book store window in Washington, I noticed a group of little schoolboys intently gazing at an immense volume within. The peculiar title attracted my eye at once. It was: Questions to Ask, or The Students' Friend, containing 32,000 pages of perplexing and time destroying questions to be asked the weary teachers. Compiled by Abbie M. Hitchcock, late of the T. H. S. I turned to a small boy nearby that was much interested in the book and asked him his name. "Jimmy Franc," he said. He also told me that the volume was selling enormously. I know that his desire for the book was inherited, and asked no more questions.

Flora Herskovits—Obtained a situation as lady assistant in a dentist's office. She proved a great attraction to our sex and finally resolved to start in business for herself. She now has an office of 14 chairs, with 18 assistants, and is on the high road to fortune.

Herbert Orr—One of my old friends desired me to look after some lumber interests in the northern part of Michigan, as he knew I was intending to journey in that part of the country. I stopped over night at a populous lumber camp, and the next day being at leisure for a few hours, I entered the log school house that stood at one end of the main and only street. Behind a pair of steel-bound specks there gleamed two black eyes that seemed to tell the observer at once that the pedagogue was bel esprit. Herbert Orr was always my bon ami and as he cordially grasped my hand I recalled the days when we were boys and wondered at his being in such an out-of-the-way place. He had taught there for many years und so wollte er es thun bis an sein todt.

Louise Mildred Koch—In the corner of a great many beautiful water-color paintings over which New York was going wild, I noticed the same familiar signature, Louise Mildred Koch was reaping high honors in her chosen profession, which she had persistently followed from her childhood.

Sadie Reynolds, Rose Yeslin—One day while in Toledo, I strayed into the court house—same old court house, too—and looked over the records of marriage licenses granted since 1892. There were many familiar names, and a few of this class whose future I so vividly saw. Frank R——— and Sadie Reynolds, 1899; Oscar W——— and Rose Yeslin, 1904. Lack of time prevented my hunting them up, but as up to this time no pleas for divorce had been entered, it is safe to say they are happily married.

Emma Paddock—In the home for aged women, the abode of so many wrecks of former beauty, fame and riches, I saw amid the motley gathering in the reception parlor on the day thrown open to visitors, a face on which remained some traces of beauty. It is true that she was toothless, wrinkled and gray; the tears rolled down her cheeks as she turned her once blue eyes upon me, and in quavering accents responded to my greeting. The friends of Emma Paddock would have wept with pity to see the childish eagerness with which she grasped my hand, and with a sort of mouth-full-of-hash accent inquired after the many she used to know.

Chas. Mandler—In the new lines of suspended train cars in our large cities, a great many conductors are employed, and as I was bowling merrily along Broadway in New York city I was obliged to give my ticket to my friend Chas. Mandler, who with his heavy beard was at first unrecognizable.

Bertha Marx—One evening as I sat in the hotel reading room I happened to glance over the list of doctors whose business cards appeared in the Free Press. The third one from the top attracted my attention in particular. It was headed: "No Cure, No

SMOKED FOR OVER TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.

Blackwell's Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco

Has been popular with smokers everywhere for over twenty-five years.

It is Just as Good Now as Ever.

Its FLAVOR, FRAGRANCE and PURITY have contributed largely to the growing popularity which pipe smoking enjoys. Pipe smoking is growing in favor because finer, sweeter and better tobacco can be had in this form and at much less cost than in cigars.

CLASS OF NINETY-TWO.

Pay," and below followed a list of the many resources which this remarkable physician had for curing the ills of man. Faith Cure, Mesmerism, Sugar Pills, Monthly Baths, Christian Science, and a few others adorned the space above the name of Dootress Bertha Marx—B. M., 1439 Woodward ave.

Bertha Hood—

I know a maiden, fair to see,
Take care!
She can both cross and friendly be,
Beware! Beware!
She is fooling thee!

She has two eyes so soft and good,
And her name was simply Bertha Hood,
Just Bertha Hood 'twas in days of yore—
But that old time name she bears no more.

Arthur Sloan—While paddling down Summit street I heard piercing shrieks issuing from the second story of a dentist's office, and amid the cries of the patient I thought I heard some soothing words uttered in a familiar bass voice. I ran hurriedly up the flight of stairs, entered the office, and discovered a man bespattered with blood vainly struggling in the grasp of a powerful dentist with a pair of grippers in his hand. After the operator had restored peace by turning on the "laughing gas," he turned towards me, and instantly I recognized in Arthur Sloan the man whom the papers were all extolling as having the week before extracted a whole set of false teeth without causing a particle of pain to the subject.

Sue Ludlow—

Sue Ludlow might marry a lord if she would,
A lord of high degree;
And jewels so fair might twine in her hair,
And a lady she'd surely be;
But oh! where would her heart be
In spite of her gems so gay?
Her heart would break for somebody's sake,
So she thought she had better say nay;
And so she married her own love,
And a business man was he.

Jeannette Kenyon, Mary Taylor—In the Old Maids' Retreat, of which I have given you an account, I was much surprised to find some of the most attractive of our members. In a little room way up next to the roof, with a cup of tea within easy reach, a cat asleep on the rug, and a portrait of Belva Lockwood on the wall, I was grieved to see the antiquated figures of the Misses Margaret Taylor and Jeannette Kenyon. Doomed for eternal time to walk the earth in single blessedness.

Carrie Grahlman, Daisy Gleason—

Oh say! can you see, among the front ranks,
The faces of those we've known oft before?
Daisy Gleason, Carrie Grahlman, derided by cranks,
Are preparing for their homes up above.

In the grand Salvation Army,
They now their banners wave,
O'er all this broad, fair country,
Which they now seek to save.

Alice Alexander—Is editor in chief of "The Tattler," a woman's rights journal published in Philadelphia. This faction in politics is assuming an immense importance, both as regards the members and their actions, and the results which they hope to obtain. I dared not call on her for fear she would endeavor to enlist me in the cause.

Miss Harnit—The ticket to the future that was given me by my mysterious visitor included a stop-over in Paradise on my return. As I dropped in and started down an isle of golden seats I was accosted by a spirit all in white, who inquired if I was tardy or had been loitering in the halls. I told her I was only a visitor stopping on my way to the other place, and she laid down her golden harp and made a note of the fact on a book under her arm. She passed along a row of vacant seats, and I could easily see that proficiency in keeping the attendance was the cause of Miss Harnit being put in that position.

Hervey M. Cheney—I anxiously consulted the C volume of the Toledo Directory for information, and as the mission of the Directory is to direct, I followed its guidance and found myself before a magnificent building on Albemarle avenue. Albemarle avenue was until some 15 years ago, called by the prosaic name of Adams street, but owing to the demands of the principal property holders it was changed to the more poetic—avenue. I was escorted over the immense establishment of my old friend and spent a very pleasant afternoon examining the many and varied processes of manufacturing carried on in the institution, and as it covered the whole block facing on the avenue, you can judge of its magnitude. As I passed down the street, I noticed on the extreme edge of the 10th story in large letters, "The Cheney Medicine Co.," and it was the genial president himself who, with the assistance of his heavy moustache, did the honor of the institution. He had nothing much to do besides keeping track of his income and buying a fine horse now and then, and expects soon to take a trip to Europe with his wife, whom I had not time to see. She was an acquaintance of the past, and although her name was a peculiar one I cannot at present writing remember it, but I do know that the oldest daughter was named for her, and the little twin boys were called Robert and Walter respectively, while the oldest boy was named after Hervey himself.

Mabel Shuster—You know very well that one of the girls whom we thought would be married right away after school closed, was Miss Mabel Shuster—but she wasn't. No indeed she wasn't, nor is she yet. Mabel is an attendant in the home for aged women, and the inmates daily tell of some new act of kindness suggested by her noble heart.

Mary Kruse—Among the fair, fat and forty blondes that graced those awe-inspiring sentors' seats in '92, there was one who gave great promise of a life's devotion to some noble cause. What that cause was, no one, not even the little lady herself knew, but when the call came for missionaries to go to some newly discovered cannibal islands in the Indian ocean, she gave herself blindly to the cause of Christianity and succeeded in converting even the young prince of the realm. Mary Kruse not only won his conscience, but she captured his heart and her name now is: Mrs. Mary Hokey Pokey, Winky Wang-Howky Kow, Henkey, Kowe Slangey Vangey Changey Chinky Lungy Chow, the queen of the Cannibal Islands.

Mr. Wm. MacPherson—When I last saw our genial chemistry teacher, he was busily debating in his mind the question of a wife. He was undecided whether to choose a blooming maid just in her teens, or a maiden just as blooming but some time past her teens. He is still a bachelor. For the past 20 years he has remained wedded only to his test-tubes and bottles, wildly debating between his two charmers. I am afraid Mr. MacPherson's choice will be made so late that the maids will both be wives and he be left to ponder on the old familiar adage, "He who hesitates is lost."

Lizzie Jones—My search for the members of '92 led me to many strange and beautiful places, and while traveling through the south I received information regarding one of our number which proved once more that reward for good deeds as well as punishment for evil is often meted out to us before we leave this lump of mud. After her graduation Miss Lizzie Jones devoted herself for many years to the education of her people in the south, spending many weary months as assistant principal in the Horton academy. She is one of the most honored and respected of the old teachers, and a recent banquet to the college included a life income to her which enabled her to pass a serene and peaceful old age in a well earned rest.

Miss Tordt—In reply to an anxious inquiry as to the whereabouts of some of my old teachers, I was directed to a modest little Queen Anne cottage in the suburbs of Dayton. From the open doorway I heard the tones of a wheezy clarionet issuing, commingled with the syllables of those terrible German pronouns. Glancing within I recognized in the black-eyed little frau teaching the kleiner kinder the principal verbs, a likeness to our patient German teacher. In the corner by the grate sat a portly gentleman intent in practicing Home, Sweet Home, on his clarionet.

Miss Sophie Mery—I happened to be in Philadelphia at the time of the great murder trial of Macaulay v Hastings, and decided to attend the closing speeches of the lawyers. I had heard a great deal of the eloquence and power of the lawyer for the plaintiff, and when I entered the court room I found the great audience in tears, while before the jury stood that great female lawyer, Miss Sophie Mery, whose sincere and touching sentiments were melting the hearts of judge and jury alike, and succeeded in securing the conviction of the defendant.

Nelson Buck—I encountered Nelson Buck in Chicago. He had "real estate" stamped on his features as indelibly as if with ink. I told him the next land I wanted to own was 2x6 feet, and with a short talk on past events we parted.

Gertrude Knights—Everyone predicted a brilliant future in literature for our poetess, for her production on Class day was of such merit as to give great hopes of fame immortal. But, well I met her the other day. She had written a few "minor" poems and had succeeded fairly well, when she decided to leave the flowery field of letters and—she up and married. The idea of leaving such romantic future to become such a curiosity as a good wife, and to have such a vulgarly plebian thing as a good and loving husband. Why, she might have become the laureate of America—she might have. O, well, I guess I'll turn over a page.

Lylah Brown—Wandering about on the 34th story of the new Herald building in Chicago, I discovered in gilt letters on an office door, "Office of the Spring Poetess, Miss Lylah Brown." I said nothing, but I quickly made my way to the elevator, for fear that she might catch sight of me, and from my antiquated garments take a theme for a classical poem.

Will Roemer and Maurice Black—On Madison street, near where the new High School building stands, is a large 14-story stone block entirely occupied by the immense dry goods firm of Roemer & Black. I was conducted over the entire building by Willie Roemer, and spent a very pleasant afternoon in going through their safe deposit vaults with the junior partner. Their specialty is cloaks, although dry goods of all kinds are kept in stock. Their motto is No Trust, No Bust, and as they are on the high road to fortune, it seems to work very well.

Florence Hawkings, Hattie Crafts, Nellie Hill—There is a well-patronized establishment on Bush street in Cincinnati that does a unique business. The sign that hangs above the door is: Suspender buttons replaced for bachelors and widowers. Terms reasonable. The Misses Florence Hawkings, Hattie Crafts and Nellie Hill, Proprietors.

Carrie Beatty and Delia Hopkins—The recent sale of the Century Magazine caused a change in the literary editorship, and who do you think was proclaimed the lucky aspirant? Why, Miss Carrie Beatty, of course. Among the most familiar of the writers whose articles adorn its columns is Miss Ovedelia Hopkins. She writes under a nom de plume of course, but then I stand in with Carrie and she told me so.

Charles McGuire—I hardly recognized in the tall, portly gentleman before me an old-time friend, but when I glanced at the card he presented me and saw in finest engraving the name Charles W. McGuire, I anxiously inquired after his family. Charlie always seemed like a family man and he told me that although he did like the old familiar bag-pipe once in a while, a sweet-toned piano with his wife on the stool was now his constant delight. When I inquired about his business, he said he had none, and to quiet my astonished gaze, informed me that after having been leader of a band for some time, he retired on a fortune and was now teaching his oldest curly haired boy the rudiments of drumming.

Mabel Booth—Occupies a high position as a teacher in a young ladies' seminary. She is severity personified, but with all her prim and curious ways she is beloved by the merry band of school girls who daily disturb the equanimimity of her pious mind.

Nellie Cober—Walking across the large park at the corner of Albemarle avenue and Michigan street the other day I met a fine-looking gentleman with the broadest grin on his face, humming gally that old love song, "My Nellie's Blue Eyes," while he seemed to beam on everyone with a desire to have them share his evident good luck. I reached his side and scraped an acquaintance with him, got his whole history; found out he was a widower twice and had just inducted Miss Nellie Cober, teacher in a ward school, to become his third helpmate.

George Colburn—In my numerous and devious wanderings I necessarily passed through many towns and villages, both large and small. One day as I was listlessly pacing the platform of the large new depot at X junction, I saw a spruce young railroad man in blue and gilt approach me with his hand outstretched: "Why, Cah, don't you know me?" he asked. "Well, George, I should say I did. Just the same as when I saw you in 'the Albany Depot.' Are you married, and how are you, anyhow?" With his usual bashfulness he told me he was still single, probably caused by that same bashfulness, and he enjoyed being in a free state very much.

Lizzie Koster—I stepped into a notion store one afternoon in the suburbs of that large and growing city of Toledo for the purpose of investing in some collar buttons. I was waited upon by an elderly lady whose age had not told upon her, and whose familiar features reminded me of a young lady classmate. When I left the store I gazed at the inscription on the window and read, Miss Lizzie Koster, Dry Goods and Notions.

Frank Hruska—Combined a tea store with an undertaking establishment, giving an oak coffin with every 200 pounds of tea. He had tried real estate for a living but found a more steady demand for the articles from which he was now making a fortune.

Helen Ward—I saw the other day. She was looking extremely well. Was leading a bright lad by the hand and wore a self-satisfied air that was quite refreshing after looking on the care-worn and worried faces of the majority of Chicago people. She was soon joined by a portly gentleman, who patted the boy on the head and betrayed himself a husband and a father in every loving look. I saw him a day or so afterward in an immense market and grocery store and was much pleased at Helen's good fortune.

Nevin Fisher—

As I walked along o'er the sands of time,
A thinking, a wishing and wondering,
Far out on a rock I saw a man
A smoking, a fishing and pondering.
The shape outlined against the sky
Had a wonderful likeness in it.

But all of a sudden there came a splash,
A tumbling, a wheezing and floundering,
And the fisherman so still before,
Was still in the watery deep,
Not a move did he make until he took
His last and fatal tumble.

But in the quiet fisherman
A sitting and fishing and thinking,
I saw, as for an instant,
'Twixt heaven and water he was,
I saw a likeness convincing,
To our gentle Fisher lad.

Lily Clouse—I must confess that the fate of our pretty little curly haired musician worried me very much. Where was she, how yas she, and what was she? I had almost given up hope, when one day while in the large dry goods store of Roemer & Black, I encountered at the sample counter the object of my search. She still had those rosy cheeks, but wore a more dignified look that proclaimed her at once a matron. She was surprised to see me again, such a stranger, and proudly presented a manly little fellow as her oldest boy. That she was happy and contented was to be seen beyond a doubt, and after wishing her a pleasant future I resumed my search for the missing ones. Oh, I nearly forgot to tell you that she did not change her name of Clouse until about five years after leaving school.

Edith Shepherd—I had the pleasure of attending a large fair at a small town in Indiana, and as is usual on such occasions, a balloon ascension was a prominent feature of the program. After the monster bag had been filled with hot air and the trapeze adjusted, the renowned female aeronaut stepped forth, and in a few moments was but a speck in the sky. The placards announced that the wonderful aeronaut and acrobat, Miss Edith Shepherd, would repeat the ascent the next day, but one such dangerous proceeding was enough for my delicate nerves.

Bessie Mayer—Occupies a position in Castle Garden as the female German interpreter. The felicity with which she uses the pronouns would charm her one-time teacher, Miss Tordt, if she could but hear them flowing with ease and rapidity from that once stubborn tongue.

Walter I. Thorner—There were some members of our class that we used to expect great things of. A great future must lie before such wit and perseverance. But alas for human aspirations! Down on the corner of Main street I noticed a tidy little clothing establishment. Tailoring, I should have said, for ready-made suits were an abomination to its owner, and in fact, his chief incentive in choosing this branch of business was the thought of having his pants nicely creased on all occasions. You know that when a man's initials spell "wit," it is apt to make him preternaturally funny, and when Mr. Thorner informed me that he was pretty well off in this world's goods (both literally and figuratively, I obligingly saw the point and laughed.

Alice Gilteau, Abbie Metzger—While in Cincinnati I discovered that I was sorely in need of a hair-cut, and as the time-worn barber's pole was no longer to be seen, I resolved to follow every long haired man I saw until one of them led me to a barber's shop. I spied a bushy, swarthy-faced Russian hastening down the street, and took my place a little ways behind him. Seeing him enter a building with large plate glass windows I looked in and saw the familiar chairs and paraphernalia of a barber shop. I also entered and saw, with astonishment, that the head barbers were Abbie Metzger and Alice Gilteau. The latter was running her fingers idly through the bushy hair of her patron, while in silvery tones I heard her mutter, "Hair cut or shave?" Miss Metzger, with two immense 64 carat diamond rings on her finger and a novel in her left hand, looked calmly in my direction and ejaculated, "Next."

Dora Klag—Is now traveling in Europe with a very rich and eccentric old maid. She answered an advertisement for a traveling companion and has been with her peculiar patron for many years. Both find congenial company in the other, and there is no prospect of the partnership being dissolved.

Lulu Cole—

There was an old woman
Lulu Cole it is true,
But not the old woman
Who lived in a shoe,
And didn't know what
With her children to do.

For she that I tell of
Did live all alone,
As generous a creature
As ever was known.
She had neither chick
Nor child of her own.

She made apple pies
And made them so sweet,
That children's eyes sparkled
When her they did greet;
And these she went giving
To all she did meet.

Herbert Whitney—Oh how tired a man does get, continually wandering up and down the streets like a man with a church subscription list. I felt as if I had been drawn through a knot-hole as I struggled against the wintry blasts that blew vindictively down Albemarle avenue, and it was with pleasure that I saw over a small church door at its upper end, these words: "Visitors to my humble roof are always welcome." I knocked timidly, but received no answer. I ventured to open the door a little way, and discovered a small room, evidently the pastor's study. I entered and seeing no one about, I sat myself down in an obscure corner of the room to rest my weary limbs. In a short time the study door opened and a tall attenuated form entered, which seemed the very embodiment of distress. The worn and seedy garments hung dolefully around him, and an unconscious sigh broke from his tight shut lips. He seated himself at his desk and proceeded slowly to open a letter that he held in his hand in a way that showed no desire to know its contents. The envelope dropped from his nerveless fingers as he read the first few lines, and landed near my chair. Unconsciously he read aloud the missive that seemed to bring so much sorrow to his honest heart. They made such an impression on my curious mind that I can give them to you exactly as I heard them:

"Owed" to the Tailor.

Oh Whitney, reverend, grave and serious man,
I pray you pay that bill now if you can;
The clothes you wear are fast becoming rags,
And as my mortgage on them comes to naught,
Please remember with what pains I wrought
To polish up your portly frame.
Your most obedient and respectful creditor,
Walter Thorner, Tailor.

During the reading of this mournful letter the tears rolled down his hollow cheeks, and he bowed his head upon his hands in deep despair. Finally in desperation he penned these words, at the same time uttering them aloud:

Oh, tailor, tailor, why do you ask
For man like me to bear the task
Of paying bills, when tribulations
'S all I can get from this congregation?
There's but one thing that I can say,
Perhaps I'll pay some other day.

He stamped, sealed and directed this epistle and returned from whence he came, without noticing my presence, and as I stole quietly from this scene of poverty I laid my contribution on his desk and only stopped to read on the envelope at my feet the name of Herbert Whitney, L. L. D.

Mr. Geo. S. Mills—Our friend and benefactor, Geo. S. Mills, is in deep trouble. Of all the difficulties he ever experienced in imparting knowledge to the unruly pupils of the M. T. S., none can compare with his present labors. His youngest boy being but four months old will insist that the midnight hours give better results in flashes of tears and howls, and develops a tendency to keep late hours very early in his existence. Geo. S. says that he squares the diameter of night so thoroughly that it seems as if the hypotheneuse of the circle of the sun will never bring about the longed for daylight.

Miss Lizzie Romels—It was only last week that the papers gave the particulars of a Granger being swindled by the time-honored gold brick. This time the swindle was unusually bold, for the perpetartor was a woman. She stopped at a small hotel in a smaller town and proceeded to entangle a neighboring farmer in a love net, after which she induced him to give her cash for the gold brick she had received from her "brother in California." I know it is awfully mean to expose the swindler, but her first name is Lizzie and her last name begins with R.

James Wieland—As I always did enjoy dancing and social pleasure, I took advantage of an invitation to an evening affair at the house of an old friend, in order to look upon the dances of the time, and also to search for relaxation from my extended traveling. I had only arrived in Chicago the day before and had spent the time in resting and making note of my past actions. In the ball-room, the center of attraction was a medium sized gentleman who seemed to make himself most agreeable to the ladies with no apparent effort. Indeed, so pronounced was the general partiality for the gentleman in question, that I inquired of my friend who it could be. "That gentleman? Why, that is Chicago's 'Ward McAllister,' James Wieland, K. G." He was changed but little, and with his small moustache and pointed goatee of blackest hue, was elegance personified.

Lulu Skinner—Posed for some time as "The Smallest Living Giant in the World," at the Eden Musee in Chicago. At last she fell in love with the living skeleton and as he was already married to the fat woman, she pined away until she became even thinner than the object of her love, and usurped his position in revenge for his taking her heart.

Jessie Kewley, Nellie Meany, Effie Sterling—As women have entered into so many of the lines of business that have heretofore been monopolized by men, I was not at all surprised to see a brave looking policeman, or woman, approaching in divided skirts. Miss Nellie Meany ordered me in the most approved style to "move on there," and as I did so, her eyes followed me with a puzzled expression, which passed away, however, when she began a conversation with the district mail deliverer, Miss Jessie Kewley. Detroit is a progressive city, but I was hardly prepared to find Miss Effie Sterling in the hotel barber shop wielding a razor with skill and dexterity.

Wesley Wuerfel—Strolling by one of the splendid new churches that adorn the small but growing village of Chicago, I heard a deep and musical bass issuing from the massive portals. As no admittance fee was charged, I entered. As I reached the entrance to the auditorium I was struck by a succession of unusually heavy sound waves, and when I recovered from my dazed condition, was wondering at the mass of sound coming from that little white-haired man in the gallery, when upon a closer inspection I found him to be none other than the rising young basso profundo, Mr. Wesley J. Wuerfel. He was much pleased to see a friend of his boyhood days, and informed me that his regular place in the choir was at the cello or bass viol, but that the demands for him to sing were certainly increasing. He was still a bachelor, but had his eye on the heiress of Mr. Rockholder.

Prof. Adams—When I last saw Prof. Adams he was so eloquent over Neptune that he barely had time to tell me of a couple of wonderful discoveries made under his directions, in two widely different fields. A new star a little to the left of Venus, and perpetual motion by means of the radiometer and phosphorus. These two discoveries placed him near the head of the scientific clinic at Washington. He occasionally visits Toledo, however, but spends most of his time in his new planet.

Regina Frank—One of the largest coal mines near Columbus is owned and operated by a lady. The profit of the mine for only one year would make a man rich, and if the coal does not give out very soon, or the owner marry an English lord with his attendant liabilities, Miss Regina Franc will soon be the richest woman in the world.

Maude Parks—Walking along Woodward avenue early one morning I encountered a hustling individual with a pad and pencil in her hand, rushing towards the scene of a rough and tumble street fight. I purposely put myself in her way, and as she had her eyes intently fixed on her destination she tried vainly to push me entirely off the earth. Turning a pair of trusting gray eyes to mine, she begged my pardon and immediately we commenced to shake each others hand with vigor. Maude Parks is on the Free Press staff and is the most successful reporter in Detroit.

Charles H. Wahl—Whirling along upper Broadway in one of the finest suspended cars, I espied over the door of a modest little building a name which seemed to promise another member of this class of '92. Alighting at the next station I returned, and after idly gazing in the window I entered. Behind the counter were several light-haired clerks, and upon my requesting to see the proprietor I was directed to the office in the rear. Over a pair of gold bowed spectacles I recognized the gray eyes and noble forehead that graced the stationary desk of old. Charles H. Wahl was the little sign that hung above the door, and he laughingly informed me that the notion and stationery business was flourishing. Charlie was married and had five of his oldest in the store as clerks; four as cash boys, and the others were at school. I wished to make a few more inquiries but a troop of youngsters came rushing into the office and so took up their father's attention that I made my escape amid the general confusion.

Edith Coder—A few years ago, if by chance you should have climbed wearily to the topmost story of a tenement house in New York city's poorest district, you would have seen a small sign hanging mournfully over a door that seemed about to drop from its one time-worn and rusty hinge. The words that in themselves told a story of want, sorrow and weary labor, were as follows: Poetry to Order. Verses on "Spring" and "Beautiful Snow," a specialty. Inquire of Miss Edith Coder. But now all is changed. A famous critic, finding merit in her verses, visited her, and was so struck by the story of suffering that showed so plainly in her patient face, that he brought her to the attention of his fellow-workers, and obtained for her the prominence which her works deserved.

Mabel Scrafford—As you may perhaps remember, Miss Mabel Scrafford received a fine diamond ring on the occasion of her graduation. Well, when I saw her last week on Summit street, she had it on her finger, but on her other hand, the engagement finger was adorned with a very handsome mate to the first ring. She had worn it for the last 13 years and she told me that her Romeo was so slow that she did not expect to be married for 13 more.

Edward J. Marshall—The Americans have always consumed a very large amount of coffee, and so particular are the drinkers of this beverage that the large grocery houses almost universally buy the coffee bean and grind it themselves in order to protect the coffee from adulteration. Tonogany was the scene of a rich mineral find, and I journeyed thence to inspect the spot visited by hundreds of sight-seers. I stepped into a corner grocery store, and the first person I cast my eyes upon was a gentleman of noble proportions who stood calmly turning the wheel of a coffee mill, and gazing earnestly towards the rear of the store at the cashier's desk sat a pretty little lady checking accounts, whose curly locks were streaked with gray, but whose bright eyes still retained the sparkle of youth. Her assistant was almost her exact counterpart, and the manly coffee grinder kept his face in the direction of them both in order not to look upon the wrong one in his blind devotion. Hearing a step the coffee grinder looked around and instantly I recognized our own Edwin of latin fame.

Gertrude Weed—Weary and footsore tramps, with one accord, hastened joyfully towards a small vine-covered cottage under an overhanging cliff a few miles from the picturesque village of Toledo. Here they are always sure of a kindly welcome, supplemented by a delicate lunch of either ham, egg or cheese sandwiches and coffee, and as the white aproned hostess bustles about attending to their numerous calls for "more," they bless the fate that placed Gertrude Weed in this delightful spot in the sacred work of relieving lazy humanity. But alas for them! One day an eastern capitalist desiring to invest in real estate, and knowing that if he came in his proper calling he would be driven away, he disguised himself as a tramp and happened to come to this paradise of Gertrude's. He came, saw and was conquered. He pleaded his suit in vain for some time, but when he mentioned suicide, Gertrude relented, and became, as she supposed, the wife of a tramp. But her reward was great, for he was a millionaire, and she was able to establish a permanent restaurant for the wandering tramp.

Jennie Navarre—On a pretty little farm in the western part of Illinois has been and is now living, Miss Jennie Navarre. She purchased the farm some little time after leaving school and established a home for friendless cats. A visitor at this feline hospital and home will see all kinds and conditions of cats, black cats, white cats, yellow cats, big cats, little cats, tom cats, thin cats, fat cats, kittens and lame cats, while their rooms or houses are arranged in parallel rows up and down the 40 acres of land.

Hattie McCoy—Met her fate at Niagara Falls. She was present when the world-renowned bridge jumper took his perilous leap from the suspension bridge, and was so struck with his darling and manly appearance that she sought an introduction. He seemed to fall in love with her at once and now they are living in a little village not far from the scene of their first meeting.

Theophilus C. Hahn—As I imitated the "Wandering Jew" in my wide and devious windings, I had an ear continually open, hoping to hear the echo of a mellow tenor voice. But I was doomed to disappointment. I never heard it. But a sight of its possessor was at last granted to me. I was obliged to pass a Sunday in the flourishing city of Tacoma, Washington, and I made my way to the most imposing church in the city. It was a magnificent structure of the Methodist style of architecture as I learned after I had entered, and would seat about 2,400 people. Over the top of the tall and imposing pulpit I could see a curly head and sandy whiskers, which, the latter, had a very familiar look. The sermon was a powerful dissertation on the evils of the cigarette, and seemed to make a deep impression on the vast congregation. I remained a few moments at the invitation of the pastor, who signified his wish to speak with any and all who desired a personal conversation. He did not seem to recognize me, but when I said "Is this the Rev. Theophilus C. Hahn, L. L. D.," he smilingly replied, "'tis he," and looking straight into my kindly eyes, said as of yore, with a wide and expansive grin overspreading his countenance, "Hello, Billy, where ye been?" He introduced me to his third wife and a few of his children that were waiting for him, and I promised to make him a longer visit in the future.

The Prophet by Himself—Up and down the avenues of our most popular graveyard I meandered slowly one afternoon, pondering over the fates of the members of that most brilliant, studious and obedient class of '92. All around me were the graves of Toledo's illustrious dead. Among the most beautiful and imposing monuments I stopped as if petrified. Was it a horrid dream? Was the inscription on that monument a fantasy of my confused brain? Over and over again I read it until in letters of fire, these words danced before my eyes: Sacred to the memory of William Clifton Carr, age 18. Physics and grammar this one did survive, And of German and Chemistry oft tried to imbibe, But howe'er hard the study that to his books he did give, Somehow or other he was always alive.

But in an evil moment, in '92s good day, She chose him Class Prophet without any pay, And though he worked with vigor till his hair turned gray, And delivered his prophecy, they killed him next day.

Pimples AND Blotches

ARE EVIDENCE That the blood is wrong, and that nature is endeavoring to throw off the impurities. Nothing is so beneficial in assisting nature as Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) It is a simple vegetable compound. Is harmless to the most delicate child, yet it forces the poison to the surface and eliminates it from the blood.

Wheat Quotations for the Day—Price Currents for Produce and Other Articles.

Wheat closed a trifle higher than Saturday after a very quiet and steady market. There were some samples of the growing crop on 'Change, some very smutty and some with the appearance of having been under the water. The visible supply decrease was larger than expected and this with the moderately good clearances of 536,000 bus, including 34,000 bbls. of flour and an early rumor that the Hatch bill had been reported adversely upon by the judiciary committee, because of its unconstitutionality, kept traders from the market. Liverpool closed 1-2d up, London 6d lower, Berlin 1 3-4 marks lower and Paris 50 centimes lower on wheat and flour.

Cash wheat sales at 86c to 86 1-4c, and to arrive at 85 3-4c to 85c. Cash closed 86c bid June sales at 86c, closing, 86c bid. DIXON-JOHNSON FIGHT.

Feather-Weight Pugilists at the Ring Side.

A Gamey Battle to be Fought on Coney Island.

Base Ball Games Played in Various Cities—All the Sporting Gossip.

New York, June 27.—At 3 o'clock this afternoon a crowd of sports witnessed the weighing in of George Dixon, the colored champion featherweight of the world, and Fred Johnson, of England, at the Coney Island Athletic club. Both men came within the required weight—117 pounds—and appeared to be in excellent form for the contest which is to take place in the arena of the club at 9 o'clock tonight.

The terms of the agreement which was signed on the 20th of May, require that the contest shall be of 20 rounds or more, and for a purse of $5,000, of which $500 goes to the loser.

Johnson has been training at Coney Island ever since the articles were signed, the work being superintended by Ben Rowland, his manager, Bill Plimmer, and Benny Murphy. Dixon, in accordance with his usual custom, has been training for only about three weeks, which he considers an ample period for getting into good shape. Tom O'Rourke, who has been training Dixon, says that whether the latter wins or loses to-night he will match him against Johnnie Van Heest at 117 pounds, and will put up as much money on the side as Van's friends are willing to meet. As Van Heest has never been defeated his backers are more than anxious to arrange a fight.

Indianapolis, June 27.—The report sent out from Louisville that the last meeting of the National league considered the delinquency of the Western league is denied by President Brush, who returned to-day. He says that no such matter was considered, and that the proceedings show there was no reference whatever to the Western league. He further says that the matter of dues could not come before the league, but instead would go to the board having charge of the national agreement. It is stated in connection with the Western league that, while it has suffered heavy financial loss during the first half of the season, which was due to the weather, there is reason to believe that all losses can be recovered before the close of the season in September next. The low salary limit has been its salvation, and nothing but good weather and good ball playing are necessary from now on to insure a profit. President Brush has forwarded a full statement in the Genins matter to President Young, in which he claims that Genins was regularly released by Von der Ahe, and that Von der Ahe violated the league constitution by failing to notify President Young of the release. He also claims that Genins has been regularly signed by Cincinnati, and properly belongs to Cincinnati. Mr. Brush says that the twelve-club league has been successful so far, and that the report is false that he and other Western club officers are going to form a new Western league.

Manager Schmelz has switched the Indianapolis series scheduled for that city, in the second championship season, to Columbus. The Columbus club starts west July 2, and remains away a month. According to the schedule Columbus plays in Indianapolis, July 30, 31, August 1 and 2. These games will be played in Columbus, our boys going to Indianapolis immediately afterward, thence home again for games with all western clubs.—Ohio State Journal.

MARK TWAIN AND THE REPORTER.

"Ten years ago," says a newspaper man, "I was very young and correspondingly fresh. I had secured a place as reporter on The Boston Traveler, and felt that I held the destinies of nations in my hands. I was taking hotel arrivals one day, when a stranger lounged up to the register and asked with a drawl; 'Editor of a paper here?' I nodded patronizingly, and he observed that it was a great responsibility. He said that he had tried hard to become a great editor, and once secured a place on a western weekly, but had been ingloriously discharged. He seemed quite heart-broken, and I proceeded to tell him that journalists were born, not made, and to make an egregious ass of himself generally. He lounged away, the clerk told me his name was Mark Twain and I made a sneak out the back way."

ONE FARE FOR THE ROUND TRIP

Cheap enough. The Michigan Central, "The Niagara Falls Route," will sell these tickets, July 5 to 7, good to return until July 15, with privilege of extension to August 15. By arrangements made with the New York Central, stop-over privileges will be allowed at Niagara Falls and at Albany, (to run over to Saratoga Springs, where the great educational meeting will be held) and at other points, and the option given of all rail or Hudson River Day Line steamers from Albany to New York.

It pays to travel over a first-class line. Do not forget that the utmost comfort, safety and convenience goes with a ticket over the Michigan Central. Its trains pass directly by and in full view of Niagara Falls, down the lovely Mohawk valley and the incomparable Hudson.

Tickets also sold to Saratoga Springs, July 5 to 13, at one fare for the round trip, with addition of $2.00 for membership fee. National Educational association, good to return until July 19, with privilege of extension to September 15. Stop-overs granted at Niagara Falls, Albany and other points. For fuller information apply to Wm. Gates, Ticket Agent, Boody House, or Union depot.

KEROSENE EMULSION.

This mixture is one of the most useful insecticides, being perfectly harmless to human life, composed of ingredients found in every household, and withal is very effective. It can be used against nearly all insects within its reach, and the cost is but a trifle. There are two ways of preparing the emulsion—one by taking equal parts of kerosene and milk, the other by dissolving one-half pound of whale oil or other bar soap in one gallon of hot water, and after removing from the vicinity of the fire, add one gallon of kerosene. The last formula is the most practical. With the ingredients together in a suitable vessel, detach the spray nozzle from the pump, place the end of the hose in the vessel, and by working the machine draw the mixture out and force it back rapidly until it is of the consistency of thick cream, which may require from five to ten minutes. Having thus made the emulsion, mix it with cold water until it is reduced to the desired strength—say three to five per cent. kerosene. Either of the two kinds of emulsion applied in the form of spray, precisely as in the case of the arsenical mixtures, will destroy plant and bark lice, cinch bug, squash bug, and, in fact, nearly all insects which are found in exposed positions.—Missouri Fruit Grower.

"It has cured others and will cure you" is true only of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The motto suits the medicine and the medicine the motto. What better assurance could you have that a remedy will cure you, than the fact that it has cured such multitudes of others?
